THE MARCH WINDS

DEAREST MADGE:

The March wind doth blow
And we shall have snow.
I always think of the dear old nursery rhyme whenever I hear the weird whistle of the wind in this blustery month.

Indoors we thoroughly enjoy the warmth of an open fire, but the cold, crisp wind brings the roses to our cheeks when we walk abroad.

Speaking of roses, there is more than a hint of spring in the air, and the roses will soon be blooming again.

And so it is, all through life: after the winter, spring; after the darkness, the dawn.

Well, here am I, musing again, when I started out to write you the description of several attractive gowns I have seen recently.

One was a stunning coat suit, combining dark-blue satin and a light-weight broadcloth in a stone-gray shade. The coat was cut with a peplum, which fitted well down over the hips and was belted in at the normal waist line with a gray belt fastened with a large gilt buckle. A deep shawl collar edged with gray wool fringe finished the coat at the neck, and large cuffs of cloth edged the sleeves. A satin scarf tied the collar together at the throat.

The skirt was blue satin, but over it was a draped tunic of cloth edged with fringe.

Her hat was a combination of cloth and satin also. The crown of the latter was trimmed at the back with a black aigrette, and the brim was made of cloth.

Another suit of golden-brown tulle had a very long coat, cut away at the waist line in the front and extending almost to the hem of the skirt in the back, where it finished in two points. Two flat, rounding capes, stitched on the edges, formed the collar; and the hat worn with this was of black taffeta, trimmed with brown plumes matching the costume.

I saw another woman wearing a tan-colored cloth suit with a short cutaway coat and a plain narrow skirt. About her shoulders was draped, when the wind did not blow it away from her body, a sapphire-blue satin scarf, lined with black chiffon and edged with fringe. Her little brown hat was trimmed with a big blue bow at the side.

With her was a young girl wearing a dull-green cloth suit made in a very modish way.

The coat had double revers, one lapping well over the other to the left side, where it fastened with two large bone buttons. The short skirt of the coat was trimmed with small buttons and black braid, put on in military fashion. This same trimming was continued on the skirt from waist to hem, and was seen on the sleeves also. Her black taffeta hat had a crown of green and was trimmed with long black quills.

My walk served me well, for I have made up my mind how to have a new spring suit made. Can you guess which model I shall follow?

Affectionately, ELEANOR.

MRS. KEPPEL LAUGHS AT BAN

Will Appear at Mayfair Next Week in Another Social Invasion.

To Arrange for Opening of the House and Return in May to Stay.

(By CHESTER OVERTON.)

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, March 9.—The recent announcement, made exclusively by the International News Service, that Mrs. George Keppel is planning a re-invasion into London society, is confirmed by the information that she is intending to return to London next week.

Although it is not likely she will ever again be such a power at court as she was in the days of King Edward, her fascination is such that she has succeeded in allaying all jealous opposition due to past successes—many of the best people will aid her in removing the social ban placed on her by King George and Queen Mary. It is also rumored that there was an agreement between her and King Edward when the latter decided she was to absent herself from England for two years. This period will be up in May and Mrs. Keppel has kept her word, touring the world during that time ostensibly looking after the education of her daughters.

Her return to London next week is not intended to be permanent, but merely to make arrangements for opening her house later in the season when the prescribed period finally expires. For the present she has taken a flat in Paris and is entertaining lavishly there, the best people flocking to her salons, especially since it has become known that she was a subject of marked favoritism by the Crown Prince of Germany during his recent visit to St. Moritz.

Everyone in social circles is interested and speculating on the plans of Alfred and Mrs. Vanderbilt, who are expected here at the end of April. Vanderbilt will start his usual Brighton coaching season in May, but there is much doubt as to whether his wife will be present at all, as the rules regarding divorced persons are still rigidly enforced.

Much interest is also being manifested in Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel, who will sail for New York Saturday on the same ship, the Mauritania, the conjecture being that they made up any difficulties which may have existed between them.

The coal strike is causing all sorts of quaint preparations among society folk. For example, fear of a milk famine has caused Lady Watts, wife of Sir Philip Watts, the great naval architect, who designed the dreadnaught to install a fine Jersey cow which she obtained at Lord Bauligh's farm in the back yard of her charming home on the Chelsea embankment.

Mrs. Trevelyan Watts, with her daughter and children are staying with Lady Watts, who is anxious to insure that the children shall not lack good milk. The cow's presence is being kept a strict secret, as the sanitary authorities would be down on it immediately if they knew for cows are now allowed in London back yards.

Lady Watts is a Belgian, the daughter of Chevalier Gustave Simonau, the famous equestrian. She has just returned to London after an absence of two years in South Africa. She has also been in the Belgian Congo, where she camped in the wilds and did some lion and leopard shooting. This winter she has been at Monte Carlo, where she did much entertaining at the villa, many American millionaires having guests. She will also do much entertaining here during the coming season. She is very bright and energetic at home, where she is to be found all of the political and social celebrities of the day.

"JERSEY LILY" APPEARS.

Lily Langtry, the Jersey Lily, who has been appearing at the music hall in a suffragette sketch called "Helping the Cause," which concerns the doling of an aristocratic suffragette imprisoned in Holloway jail, has had a very unpleasant experience during the past few evenings, since the hammers were being swung abroad in the streets of London. In the play Mrs. Langtry declaims in favor of votes for women, with the result that she has been hissed and booed by the audience as if she were a real suffragette.

Joe Brooks, who arrived on the Lusitania, announces the opening of "Bea Hur" at Drury Lane on April 15, an event that is awaited with much interest. Brooks says he will engage an English company, the only American feature of the show being the machinery and the horses for the chariot race.

Oscar Hammerstein is busily engaged preparing for his summer opera season and is also training for the American baseball game that he and the American members of his company will play against the London Journalists next month at the Botanical gardens in Regent's Park. The proceeds will be given to charity. Oscar, who has become very popular with the press, is now a regular attendant at all press club gatherings. He has promised to be an attraction at the ball game by playing center field, clad in the regulation field uniform, plus his famous top hat.

The Marquis of Queensberry returned from America a few days ago for the purpose of facing his creditors, who recently made him bankrupt.

MAJOR'S LIFE GOES OUT WITH THE TRUMPET CALL.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, March 9.—A touching death scene, recalling Thackeray's description of the death of Colonel Newcombe, has just occurred at Windsor Cavalry barracks.

The trumpet of the Second Life Guards was sounding the trumpets' assembly prior to the last call of the day, "The Last Post." As the echoing strains were dying away the squadron's trumpeter, Samuel Goodhall, who was critically ill, heard the familiar call from his bed and then fell back dead.

Goodhall was only forty-three years of age. He was born in the regiment, and had been a member of the band since fourteen years of age. He is to be accorded a full military funeral.

When Notable Got in Way of Snapshot Man

THE HON. MRS. CECIL BINGHAM.

LADY CURZON.

Concerning Persons Who Are Seen Above

Miss Ghita Sowerby, whose play, "Rutherford and Son," at the Court theater is creating an enormous amount of discussion and interest. This is Miss Sowerby's first play, and judging by its success the managers of London will scarcely allow it to be her last. Primarily the play is a struggle for expression of a family of young people against the overbearing strength of an intensely egotistical father.

A well known and beautiful Parisienne is Miss Jane, who appeared as the King of Rome in the recent fancy dress ball at the Hotel Maurice.

Mrs. Irene Osgood, the well known author, in the garden of her villa at Algiers. Among Mrs. Osgood's works will be remembered "Servitude," and a number of most charming poems.

The Hon. Mrs. Cecil Bingham is the daughter-in-law of Lord Lucan. Mrs. Bingham, who was formerly Mrs. Chauncey and one of the leading hostesses in America, recently gave a dance for her step-daughter.

Miss McAlpin of New York, who has recently been paying a short visit to London. Miss McAlpin, who is one of the best known and popular members of the "Four Hundred," is very beautiful and of the American type which the famous artist Dana Gibson has made so popular over here.

Lady Curzon is a cousin of her husband and is the only daughter of the late Colonel the Hon. Montagu Curzon. It is arranged that Lord Curzon shall oppose John Burns at the next election.

CZARINA'S HEALTH ALARMS ALL RUSSIA

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

ST. PETERSBURG, March 9.—Disquieting reports are current respecting the czarina, who, it is said, had another breakdown in health.

Her ailment this time is believed to be a recurrence of the fainting fits she suffered several years ago, while other unfavorable symptoms have also been manifested.

The czar and czarina are about to leave for their palace at Livadia, in the Crimea, in the hope that the change of air and scene may have a beneficial effect. King George, of England, telegraphed asking that he and the queen may be kept constantly informed as to the czarina's condition. The czar is in the best of health and spirits, though naturally worried over the condition of his consort.

The residence within the grounds of the czar's Livadia palace is being prepared for the King of Montenegro in case he may soon qualify as the next of Europe's kings in exile.

While here a few days ago he wept bitterly as he told his two daughters, the grand duchesses, that they would have to find a home for their father. The czar openly defended his king.

This is one of the reasons why Secretary of State Sazonoff keeps urging intervention by the powers in the Russo-Balkan war. While the Turkish territory on the Montenegrin frontier is devoid of troops, and Turkey is breaking over into Montenegro, whose king has neither the men nor the money to mend his fences. He is, therefore, kept on the throne because of the belief that his close family relationship with the rulers of Russia and Italy would be a good assurance against foreign troubles. The agitation on America's attitude on the passport question continues. Political leaders here have now dug in a law nine years old, intended to be used on Japan in time of war, which provides that if a power loses the right to favorable treatment Russia can, on imperial ukase, impose any duty she chooses against imports and any restrictions against immigration.

OLYMPIC LAUGHTER IS REWARD OF DE SAGANS

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—Olympic laughter greeted the first serious effort of the De Sagans to re-enter aristocratic Paris society since their marriage. Their recent dinner reception was announced with a great flourish of trumpets of "Figaro" and the "Gauche." Here is how it read:

"A dinner, followed by a reception, will be given next Thursday at the home of the Duke and Duchess de Talleyrand. The dinner party soiree was characterized by the fact that not a single member of the French nobility was present. The French boycott was complete. The duke had done his best to break through it, but in vain. It closes the stand that they don't read Anna Gould's remarks as valid, and treat her as the women of noble lineage resent the Princess Rosaploist, formerly Miss Reid, of Kentucky.

The only titled people who deigned to attend the Talleyrand affair were the big game Marquis Villeneuve and the American Countess de Cotteggen, formerly Miss Blake, of Boston. A fairly good number of ordinary members of the American colony, however, put in appearance. Such were Mr. and Mrs. Clint Smith, Mr. and Mrs. David Jayne Hill, Mrs. George B. Newton, Frank Holman Black, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Parsons, Mrs. Lilla Lawlor, Lawrence V. Bennett, Mrs. Lilla Lawlor, of San Francisco, Mrs. and Miss Shaw, and Mrs. Siegel, who recently gave a dinner in honor of the duke and duchess. Formerly the duchess would not have been invited to her functions. Club critics also call attention to the fact that in the days of Count Boni de Castellane, the most talented of the guests, whereas at the recent soiree the entertainers were Jack Emerson, an English baron, and Miss Patterson, an American singing student. The big gold-laced ladies were also conspicuous by their absence.

CANNOT BE BOUGHT.

"I haven't a sou, but an old castle to be repaired, yet as poor as I am, I can't be bought for $12,000 a year."

Thus means Jules Klatarsky, a Polish officer, as he wanders disconsolately around the Eliseum Palace hotel. He pours this mournful tale into the bored ears of his friend, Prince Leon Radziwill. The cause of the portion of the tale is the Countess Comulka, formerly Mrs. Krasne of Syracuse, N. Y. The countess has the engagement band.

Three times married and five divorced, he has been up to date. Last summer she was engaged to Baron von Carball, who left his expected nuptials to look after his property in Tripoli. She is now engaged to Klatarsky, but he is pouring his tale of woe into the unwilling ears of his friends because he thought the countess was a millionnaire, and in the depths of disappointment to find she has but a mere pittance of $12,000 a year. He says he doesn't see how he can restore his ruined estate and live respectably on that small income. Meanwhile the countess is trying to soothe the excited nerves of her fiancé by getting the Marquis de Tress of Rome to play the guitar and sing Italian love songs to her.

24,883 MILES IN 9 YEARS IS HIS RECORD

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—William Robinson of New York, an old resident of Paris and dean of the American colony, a millionaire who talks socialism with the fluency of Bernard Shaw, drinks no alcohol, but puts to flight the thirst of others, has just finished a walk greater than the circumference of the earth.

According to Robinson's own account, he is or ought to be ten miles off the earth. In nine years, eight months and eight days Robinson has walked 24,883 miles. "I'm ten miles off the earth now," he said to the International News Service correspondent, as he was beginning to walk 24,883 miles more. Robinson proved his distance by a pedometer. Every day in the year, shower or shine, he walked seven miles. Frenchmen refer to him as the big American millionaire walking man. Robinson said:

"The English statute mile is 5280 feet and the British nautical admiral's knot is 6080 feet, but what is not generally known is that the standard nautical knot is 6082 feet, this being obtained by dividing 21,600 geographical miles, 34,388,400 feet. At the earth's greatest circumference I find by pedometer that it takes 2299 of my steps to make a mile. Nothing brings out better than walking the smallness of this planet, the insignificance of the solar system, the mightiness of the universe and the finger divine design in it all."

Robinson began to walk as a cure at 45 and at 55 engaged in his second lap, walking a distance equal to the circumference of the earth.

LONDON AWARDS $55,000 FOR COMING HORSE SHOW.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, March 9.—Premiums and prizes of the value of $55,000 are awarded in the various classes at the "Thoroughbred Hunter and Fox Pony Show" to be held at the Royal Agricultural Hall, London, from Tuesday until Saturday.

The show will have many attractions to the general public, not the least interesting being the contests for the polo ponies and their diminutive cousins, the Welsh Highland ponies. Polo ball races, musical chairs, and exhibitions of skill in the handling of ponies are among the events on the program.

PARISIAN CROOKS WORK BOLDLY IN DAYTIME

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—Parisian crooks are not about audacity is being adopted as a motto, though in a very different sense from that which it is intended by the apache elements. It will be perceived from some of the latest performances of the Parisian apache. Every visitor to this city knows the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, which leads from the Arc de Triomphe to the famous wood at St. Cloud in the morning on a fine day, this fashionable thoroughfare is thronged with riders, carriages and pedestrians; but it was that very hour which was selected by two miscreants for the robbery from two ladies who were walking quietly along.

One was at the corner of the Avenue de Malakoff, waiting for a favorable opportunity of crossing the road, when a mere youth went up to her, seized her by the throat, and before she recovered from her surprise had bolted with her watch. The adventure of the other lady was, if possible, even more curious. She was in that part of the footpath which is close to the road, when a man made a grab at her reticule, disappearing from view before she had time to denounce him. As the lady would have it, she had stowed a quantity of jewelry, as well as a goodly sum of money, in her bag, and she stands very little chance of recovering her property.

CATCH COUNTERFEITERS.

Fortunately, the police, on their side, are not inactive. They make constant raids at night in different districts of Paris, and their latest battle, this time in the Faubourg Montmartre, has been exceptionally successful. In addition to a number of apaches, they have contrived to capture several counterfeiters, hotel thieves and other shoddy individuals of both sexes, some of whom are foreigners. As is demonstrated by the fact that the list includes, besides several Russians and Swedes, even a Belgian and as many as nine Germans, all of whom are said to have been provided with faked papers of identity and to have been "wanted" for various offenses.

The next battle is to take place in the neighborhood of the Ecole Militaire, where quite a host of undesirable have congregated for some time past. It was this occasion, however, when Gambetta, denounced in a memorable speech at Belleville, when he described its members as "eleven ivres," drunken helots, and told them that he would track them to their lairs. Unhappily, this element has developed exceedingly since his day, and recent experience has proved no more than the urgent need for drastic measures.

MILITARY AVIATION.

The agitation in favor of organizing military aviation, the fourth arm of defense, is increasing daily. A very powerful plea in favor of this work is made by M. Monis, the former premier. He points out that when he heard of, with much of which he finds fault, and what remains to be done.

As regards the education of a military aviator, he suggests that the system should be changed on the ground that it is far from perfect. At present pilots are recruited from officers, non-commissioned officers and volunteers from the corps. There is no examination in regard to physical and technical aptitude. There is no slight contest. The recruit receives his first instructions at Versailles or Chalais. M. Monis considers that this instruction is insufficient. On leaving Versailles or Chalais, the pupil is sent to a civil school to complete his apprenticeship. As soon as he obtains the brevet of the Aero Club, he proceeds to a military center, where he trains with a view to securing his pilot's certificate. To obtain this, he has to sit for a technical examination, which, according to M. Monis, is of a very restricted character. That is all.

The equipment of the military centers in various parts of the country leaves a great deal to be desired. The provisional sheds do not protect the aeroplanes from dampness, with the result that new machines deteriorate rapidly, and the accommodation for the aviators is very faulty. Then, too, the staffs are too small. At Etampes, for example, there are only thirty men for fifty machines.

M. Monis declares that the fundamental error lies in not having seen that aviation was a real arm of defense, and that it ought to be organized like the other arms, and have its own staff.

ENGLAND NEAR WAR, SAYS STEAD

The "Slippery Slope Leads to Anarchy and Civic Strife," He Writes.

Way of Escape From Trouble Is Said to Be Very Simple.

(By W. T. STEAD.)

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, March 9.—Last week I reported that in Britain we are on the brink of hell, but the approach to the inferno is not down a precipitous crag; it is down a shelving beach, and we are being drawn irresistibly down the slippery slope which leads to anarchy and civil war.

All week there have been desperate efforts made by the government and all friends of social order and justice to arrest the movement to the abyss. So far they have been unavailing. The miners are exultant in the knowledge that they paralyze the whole industry of the nation as easily as a man can stop a watch, if he cares to thrust his fingers into the works.

Negotiations have been going on all week between the parties, all conducted in privacy. It is amazing, the number of men who exist who can be rolled upon to keep their counsel on occasions such as these. The general opinion is gaining ground that, as a leading publisher said to me the other day, nothing can be done until both men and masters have had a taste of it. To this one could object if the bitter cup had to be tasted only by the miners and mine owners, but it is becoming every day more evident that the chief suffering will be born not by the disputants, but by non-combatants and neutrals.

LAYING OFF TRAINS.

Already railways are laying off trains, and shipping companies are discontinuing the services of steamers. All over the country, where industries are worked largely by hand, short cuts are reported. Oranges are rotting in Spain because steamers are laid up which were to have carried them to London. Cargo freights have gone up in Norway 50 per cent owing to the uncertainty of the supply of north country coal. Iron works everywhere are closing down. Mills and under notice and already the shadow of coming famine spreads over the land.

Lady Aberconway has gravely proposed a great scheme which is almost staggering in its suggestion as to the seriousness of the struggle upon which we have embarked. Five hundred thousand workmen who have no quarrel with their employers, drew no wages this week. Next week the number will be doubled or trebled. Funds of trade unions which are now concerned in the strike will be depleted by out-of-work allowances paid to their suffering members, but the paralyzed industry will throw upon the streets a hungry horde which is estimated at from two to ten million of men, women and children. Hunger knows no law, starvation converts even a saint into a savage.

It is therefore proposed that municipalities should at once commandeer all stores of coal within their limits and enforce regulations fixing a maximum price both for coal and bread, provide portable ovens so that all private cooking may be rendered unnecessary; supply boiling water free of charge for making tea and coffee.

STATE OF WAR.

These are the measures, such as the opening of public kitchens in every district for providing a meal for sufficient to keep body and soul together in the cost of a cent, remind us vividly that we are practically entering upon a state of war, in which we should be under constant obligation to provide only law will be that of self preservation, and food of the community will be liable to be seized by the authorities in order to save it from plunder and looting at the hands of the mob.

Everything Lady Aberconway suggests will have to be done if the strike continues; but I doubt very much whether the strike will continue beyond next week. The way of escape by which it is possible for both parties to rescue themselves from the present deadlock is very simple. It is asked who would not lose the mine owners against the state or lose arising from working the mines upon the men's terms for an experimental period of three months. The maximum loss which it would entail upon the mine owners is estimated at $2,000,000 a month, or for three months $6,000,000. This is less than the amount which is being sent away in sacrificed wages and in ruined trade, which is stagnant throughout England.

REOPENING PITTS.

If the government could insure immediate reopening of the pits by guaranteeing their readiness to meet the risk, which by no possibility could exceed $2,000,000, and which might not amount to anything at all, it is difficult to see why this program should not be adopted as an insurance against the immeasurable catastrophe of impending anarchy and civil war.

This suggestion has been brought personally to the knowledge of the king, of the prime minister, of the chancellor of the exchequer and to the president of the Board of Trade. It has excited keen interest in the highest quarters and sanguine enough to believe it is possible that by the end of the week the scheme or some modification of it may be adopted. It has great and obvious advantages. It saves the amour propre of both parties.

The equipment of the military centers in various parts of the country leaves a great deal to be desired. The provisional sheds do not protect the aeroplanes from dampness, with the result that new machines deteriorate rapidly, and the accommodation for the aviators is very faulty. Then, too, the staffs are too small. At Etampes, for example, there are only thirty men for fifty machines.

M. Monis declares that the fundamental error lies in not having seen that aviation was a real arm of defense, and that it ought to be organized like the other arms, and have its own staff.

KNOX'S TRIP WATCHED BY EUROPE

Oscar Hammerstein Is Well Pleased With His Opera Showing.

LONDON, March 9.—Secretary Knox's trip to the republics contiguous to the Panama canal is regarded by Old World statesmen and publicists as an incident of far-reaching international importance. By a Berlin authority his Panama speech is characterized as "addressed secondarily to the American nations, but primarily to the powers of the Old World that the United States claims a right to exclude from a footing in the new."

Attention is called by a Paris journal to the fact that Lodge's senate argument on the arbitration treaties was almost coincident with Knox's announcement that the canal would be a method of emphasizing the utility of the Monroe doctrine, the paper being "truly of the opinion that the two declarations must be read together—the former startling in the candor of its redefinition of principle and the latter yet more startling in the explicitness of its concrete illustrations."

PLAYING FALSE.
"If Japan, despite repeated denials by Tokyo, is actually laying pipes for future use in the village of Magdalena Bay," thinks London Review, she is playing both Washington and London false, and the British Foreign office ought not to delay effective representations to Tokyo."

British utterances as to the Knox trip are uniformly congratulatory to all concerned, the hope being expressed that it will "silence the greater part of the Latin republican cavilling of which we hear so much, and increase the influence of the United States in the whole canal region." There is laid by the Independence Belge of Brussels on the need of hastening the work of organizing the legal and commercial status of the canal and its hinterlands, so that European shippers may know where they stand.

President Taft's course in the new Mexican imbroglio is approved here without reservation, the endorsement being especially emphatic in London. Based upon cables from special articles in Mexico City, give fairly good explanation of the peculiarly exasperating situation along the Mexican border, some regret being expressed that the neutrality laws of the United States "show certain imperfections of action at times the impetuosity of action."

OSCAR HAPPY.
Oscar Hammerstein will close his first opera season with a gala night and send Felice Lyne, Orville Herrold and other favorites of his company on a provincial tour. He has proved that both orchestra and soloists can be filled when prices are reduced to theater level and fresh voices are provided.

It is doubtful, however, whether he can make headway against Covent Garden as a social institution during the regular season, but he has secured the support of the Duke of Argyll and Lord Howard de Walden, and the best boxes are already engaged.

Covent Garden will virtually repeat last season's programs and artists, and not offer any novelties more striking than "Conchita" and "The Jewels of the Madonna." Mr. Hammerstein has not contemplated his rival lists of operas, but asserts that he has quite a few surprises in reserve in addition to two or three English works.

Fernold is the author of a play repeatedly postponed at the Criterion and now booked for Tuesday night. Its title, "The Play," indicates a mathematical puzzle, but the first night will be something of a parliamentary event. Robert Lorraine and Miss Illington are the central figures in the production, and as E. Smith's play will take a subordinate part many conservative politicians will be there to applaud.

John Galsworthy's play, "The Pigeon," is taking an early flight from the Royal Lyceum, "Milestones" by Arnold Bennett and "The Pigeon" by E. Smith's play will take a subordinate part many conservative politicians will be there to applaud.

FAMOUS RUINS OF OLD ROMAN TIME

Tourists Should Not Neglect a Visit to the Arenes de Lutece in Paris.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—Many visitors to Paris, or for that matter, many of its inhabitants, have never seen the Arenes de Lutece, though they lie just out the Rue de la Harpe, and near the Jardin des Plantes. They are a relic of old Roman time, and, indeed, indeed, that they were actually destroyed during the reign of Julian the Apostate, but miraculously have not been destroyed.

Unfortunately, at later periods, many of the stones were utilized for house-building, and such was the eventual rack and ruin that in the Middle Ages the site of the Arenes was completely buried, and was covered with villas and vineyards. A little more than forty years ago, when the Rue de la Harpe was being constructed, the remains of the famous Arenes were revealed to view, and archaeologists were very eager to arrange for the purchase of the entire site by the municipal government, but unluckily funds were not forthcoming.

A portion of the Arenes was, however, saved and restored, and it is now contained in a neat enclosure situated in a square with several picturesque old houses on the other side. It is only a portion of the original amphitheater, but it shows in three of its sides, with a view to the river, the oblique arrangement of the tiers of the seats.

FAIR SEX AND OTHERS, AS SNAPPED ABROAD

LLOYD GEORGE.

KULIABKE'S ARREST BEGINNING OF TROUBLE

ST. PETERSBURG, March 9.—The arrest of Colonel Kuliabke, who was head of the secret police at the time of the assassination of M. Stolypin, is another step in the work of the reorganization of the third section.

The nominal charge against Kuliabke is that he embezzled secret service funds, but the general impression is that there is merely a pretense and that the Tsar has become concerned that the whole secret police system is rotten and that a good part at least of the terrorism in Russia is the direct work of agents provocateurs.

In the senate at St. Petersburg the trial in camera of 150 members of the Armenian revolutionary party has begun. Three hundred and thirty witnesses will be called. The case for the prosecution is that a series of arrests made in Tiflis, Valadikavkaz and Rostoff between 1907 and 1910 revealed the fact that members of the society secretly known as the Dashnakistun, which was founded by Turkish Armenians in 1890 to secure the liberation of Armenians under the Turkish rule, began after 1904 to assume a revolutionary and anti-Russian character. The new aim of the society was to establish a Caucasian federated republic, and it is alleged that since 1906 its members have been guilty of a regular series of terrorist outrages on Russian officials.

WOULD RAISE CUSTOMS.
The nationalists have introduced in the duma a bill prohibiting the admission to Russia of Jewish customs of the United States and also raising the general customs tariff and imposing certain special duties against goods and ships of the United States.

A wrestling match which ended fatally is reported from Lodz (Russian Poland).

During the international contest in that town the famous Italian champion Cartagiani, wrestled with Stanislas Cysankiewicz, a Rutenian champion.

After a prolonged struggle Cartagiani succeeded in throwing his powerful adversary, and Stanislas fell on his back and died instantly.

The umpires declared that Cartagiani's wrestling was quite correct.

An empty sledges drawn by two horses belonging to an official named Kosmolev, came into the Russian frontier station of Gorka on Sunday.

A search was made along the road, and some fragments of Kosmolev's clothing were found, and further back the bones of seven freshly killed wolves.

The official had evidently been pursued by a pack of wolves, and had shot a number of them, but, unfortunately, he had either been pulled out of the sled or have fallen out of it and been torn to pieces.

In curious circumstances a fine new coat has been found at the little town of Feodorina, in Russia. The townsfolk reacted it from the proceeds of a voluntary subscription for a penny per glass of vodka consumed, which they imposed on themselves for a whole year.

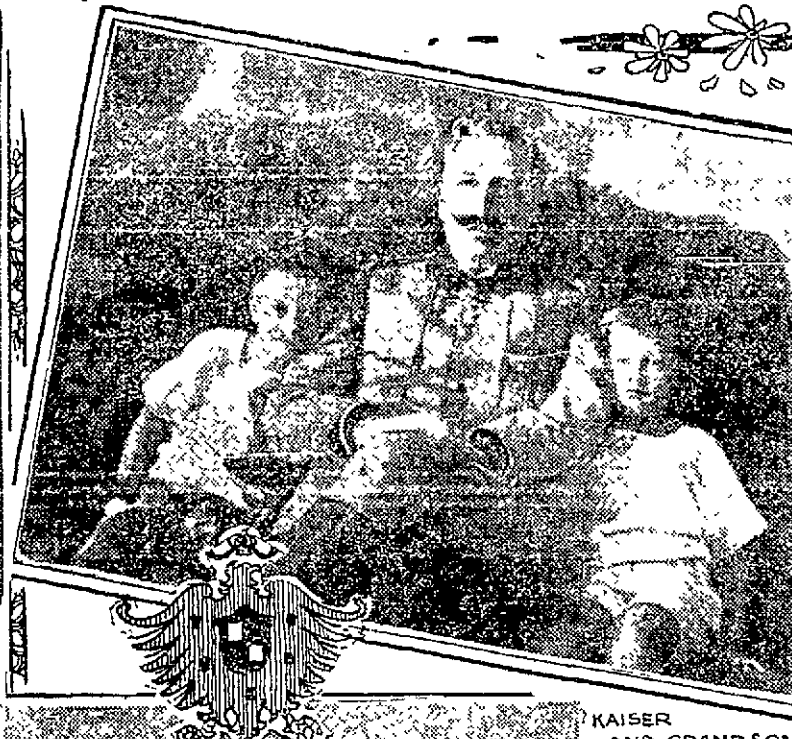

A dispatch from Warsaw received here today says that the Polish and Russian lawyers have declined to undertake the defense of Damaz, Macech, the monk from the Pauline Convent at Canastota, who killed his cousin, Wladaw Macech, in a cell and sewed the body in a sofa.

He confessed to the murder.

The motive given by the lawyers is that they do not desire to mix in the internal affairs of the Catholic church. The trial of Macech is to begin on February 27.

spot where, as he says, the Emperor and the court were located, and he always points to the barred door in which, as he affirms, wild beasts were kept, and to one dismal passage into which, as he asserts with equal positiveness, the corpses of their victims were thrust, to find their way eventually into the river.

However this may be, the Arenes de Lutece are well worth an expedition, which can very easily be managed. Near the Municipal Council talks of buying the ground which is occupied by buildings of the Omnibus Company, and which, when excavated, will disclose another portion of the Arenes. But nothing short of the demolition of a certain number of houses in the Rue Morge and in an adjoining street can reveal the whole amphitheater to view, and as the expense to be entailed by the proposed purchase is estimated at $150,000, it is not likely that the work of thorough excavation will be undertaken for years, if ever. This is a great pity, but even at the present date it is possible to obtain a fair idea of these famous Arenes.

PARIS, March 9.—The National Society of Fine Arts has decided that its annual auxiliary in the Bois de Boulogne, which opens in May at the Chateau de Bagatelle, shall this year be exclusively devoted to pictures, drawings and statuary representing the art of dancing from the Morris dances of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries to the present time.

Selections are being made from public and private art galleries throughout Europe to realize this "Apotheosis of the Dance." AUTO FOR SMUGGLERS.
Customs men on the Belgian frontier had an exciting encounter with smuggler automobilists near Lille this week. Customs officers outside Tournai saw a great speed from the Belgian frontier, and stepped forward to summon the driver to halt.

The car did not slacken speed, and a man sitting beside the driver waved a revolver. The customs men sprang back and the automobile rushed past.

The excise men pursued the car on cycles, firing their revolvers at long range. A bullet struck one of the smugglers on the wrist. The car burst a tire, but kept up a good pace, until Lille was almost reached. The smugglers then turned off the main road, and the automobile skidded and fell on its side. The two smugglers escaped.

The car was found to contain a ton and a half of tobacco. It was an 18-horsepower machine, specially built for smuggling, for the front was covered with a massive V-shaped front screen intended to brush through barriers on the road.

Last December the Hazebronek excise men seized a powerful smuggling car fitted with a similar screen.

MYSTERIOUS THEFT IN RAILWAY TRAIN

German Diplomat Is Robbed of Valuable Papers While on a Journey.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

MILAN, March 9.—A good deal of mystery prevails in connection with a robbery which took place on the Milan-Lugano train a few days ago, and of which a number of the German diplomatic service was the victim. He was carrying some important documents from Italy to Berlin which were snatched from him when he had alighted from the carriage for a few moments.

The report of the robbery was at first denied from a semi-official source, but now an eye-witness of the scene has come forward with circumstantial details of the affair. He states that, in company with his daughter, he entered the compartment which the German was occupying, at Alrosa. As the train was starting, two young men, both very well dressed, jumped into the train.

After passing through St. Gothard tunnel the train stopped at Gossheim station, and the man who tells this story together with his daughter, went into the corridor of the train. He was still in the corridor when the German traveler, who had got out to take a cup of coffee, returned and discovered that a leather wallet, which had been in a valise on the luggage rack, had disappeared. The two young men had also vanished.

The German, who was greatly distressed, started to his fellow-traveler, "I was going from Florence to Berlin. In my wallet were papers of such great importance that I was afraid to entrust them to the post, fearing they might be lost. They were originals of great value, and no copies are in existence. If I arrive in Berlin without them, and without the hope of obtaining them again, my career is at an end. They represent seven months of untiring labor."

In view of these definite statements, there seems to be no doubt, in spite of the semi-official denial, that the theft actually took place, and it would seem to be the result of a well arranged plan. The two young men evidently knew that their intended victim was the bearer of valuable papers and waited for a favorable opportunity of gaining possession of them.

Those Who Are Pictured

Lloyd George's portrait, by Hoppe, is a speaking likeness of the man who is freely designated Premier to succeed Asquith, which resignation, owing to differences with his colleagues on both Home Rule and the Suffrage, is said to be imminent. A George Premiership under a George Kingship would be an odd coincidence. But it is not likely that it will be other than a short-lived one.

A new portrait of Lady Brooke and her son, the Hon. Charles Fulkre Greville, is shown. Lady Brooke is the daughter-in-law of Lord and Lady Warwick and married Brooke four years ago. She is the daughter of Sir William Eden and possesses the unusual Christian name of Elfrida. Lord Brooke takes an active part in the Territorial movement and has seen service in the South African War, and during the Russo-Japanese War was a special correspondent for Reuters.

A February bride was Lady Moya Brovne, second daughter of Lord and Lady Alton, whose marriage to Allan Mackenzie of the Coldstream Guards took place on February 15.

Here is a snapshot of the Kaiser and two of his grandsons. It will be noticed how the prince on the left favors his father, the crown prince, while the prince on the right closely resembles his mother, the Crown Princess Cecilie.

PARISIAN AGENCY HIRES RELATIVES

Matrimonial Affairs Arranged, Including Bride, Trouseau, Flowers, Etc.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—Paris matrimonial agencies are peculiar. If we can believe the story of a "young man who was shaved, dressed, presented, married, banqueted and supplied with a requisite number of uncles and aunts in the space of three weeks. He was fresh from the provinces.

"We can certainly get you married in two weeks," said the matrimonial agent. "What kind of a bride would you like?" "Oh, so and so."

"Very well, we have one who may please. What kind would you like, the mother-in-law to be?" "Oh, so and so."

"Well, this one is just the thing." The mother-in-law was fond of feasts and banquets and the bridegroom flattered her taste in that way. The wedding was at once prepared. "Where are your papers?" "Oh, I do not know."

"Well, we know of an agency that gets all the necessary papers." The young man consented. "Who is the best man?" "I have not a soul in Paris."

"We will supply you with one. What kind of wedding feast? How many carriages?" "I have no idea." "Then we shall refer you to another agency which attends to all the ceremonies. They will see to sending out letters of invitation, have a sufficient number of guests, lay out the bride's trousseau, etc. Now as to the bride's trousseau. We can recommend an agency that supplies the orange blossoms. What about relatives?"

"After that, he has some relatives at the wedding." "Certainly." "But you have no family?" "Then we can supply you with them." A father costs 25 francs, a mother 20 francs, and uncles and aunts are 10 francs each. "Very well, let me have at least as many as I need."

DUKE'S DEATH GERMANY'S GAIN

Duchy of Luxemburg Will Go to Kaiser on Ruler's Demise.

Politics Do Not Rule in Berlin's Choice of New Mayor.

BERLIN, March 9.—The prospect that death will soon end the long continued illness of the Grand Duke of Luxemburg is turning attention to that interesting semi-independent little state, as it means an interesting legal battle for the succession and may mean the actual incorporation of the grand duchy into the German empire, of which it is already practically a part.

The present grand duke has six daughters, all under age. The succession is regulated by the Salic law and Nassau family law, and, as male heirs to the grand duchy are nil, and a claimant is certain in the person of the son of a morganatic marriage of the grand duke's late brother, a fight for the throne will in due course add another chapter to the romances of the royal houses.

The present grand duke and his late venerable father have already experienced the most extraordinary and romantic vicissitudes in their tenure of the grand ducal throne. By a curious coincidence they belong to the Orange-Nassau house, which until the birth of a daughter to Queen Wilhelmina in 1909, was also the subject of immense speculation and anxiety to their subjects in Holland.

LEAVES TWO SONS.

When in November, 1905, the old Grand Duke of Luxemburg passed away, at the age of 88, he left only two sons, the present grand duke and his brother, as possible male heirs of his little kingdom. He had succeeded his father as Duke of Nassau in 1849, but when the great European smash came in 1906, and the small German nation was called upon to side with either Prussia or Austria, Luxemburg, like Hanover, went with France Joseph and suffered the same fate as the unfortunate kingdom.

The duke was treated little less leniently by the German Kaiser than Hanover, and the Duke of Nassau took a path of compromise. He was called upon to side with either Prussia or Austria, Luxemburg, like Hanover, went with France Joseph and suffered the same fate as the unfortunate kingdom.

ROYAL MARRIAGE.
But, as is so often the case, a royal marriage helped to put things right. As well known as Luxemburg are intimately connected with the royal house of Baden, and when in 1885, the exiled duke's daughter, Milda, married the Grand Duke of Baden, it was the harbinger of better relations between the dispossessed duke and the royal family in Berlin. In 1889 he fell seriously ill and a royal highness was called upon to succeed him. The old duke and the present Kaiser on the island of Malin in September, 1888, and it was decided to bury all feelings. But the grand duke had in the meantime passed to the King of Netherlands, the father of Queen Wilhelmina. In 1889 he fell seriously ill and a royal highness was called upon to succeed him. The old duke and the present Kaiser on the island of Malin in September, 1888, and it was decided to bury all feelings. But the grand duke had in the meantime passed to the King of Netherlands, the father of Queen Wilhelmina.

He died in November, 1905, and was succeeded by the present grand duke. This prince married a princess of Portugal, a Catholic, and, under the marriage arrangements, all her and daughter have been brought up in their mother's religion, which is also the religion of the great majority of the people, who number altogether 246,846.

Neither politics nor party services have anything to do with the choice of the mayors of the German cities. The mayors of the German cities are elected by the people, and are not subject to the control of the government.

SMUGGLERS' AUTO IS CAPTURED

Frontier Officials Battle on the

Who Escape.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, March 9.—With all the desperate daring of old-time smugglers, several men in an 80-horsepower motor-car crossed the French frontier from Belgium, and after a desperate encounter with customs officials escaped.

The smugglers were first seen by eight customs men, who were posted in ambush on the main road near Tourcoing, to be driving at full speed from Belgium.

Two customs officials went into the middle of the road to try and stop the car, when the chauffeur, without slackening pace, suddenly leveled a revolver and fired.

The officers thereupon opened fire at the car, and one of the two men in the front seat was hit on the wrist.

Half a dozen officers jumped on their bicycles and were giving chase when one of the tires of the car burst. The smugglers still kept on, but the road was slippery, and the car skidded, causing one of the wheels to collapse and the car to be thrown over on its side.

Seeing that they were about to be caught, the smugglers threatened their pursuers with revolvers and managed to escape by climbing the wall of a cemetery.

The car was seized and was found to be fitted up for smuggling. It contained 38000 pounds of tobacco, valued at $4000.

LEAVING HER "TRAIL OF BROKEN HEARTS"

Pretty Marie Lohr Will Now "Jump"

AVIATOR-ACTOR,

Marquis of Stafford,
Marquis of Anglessey,
Hon. Neil Primrose,
Duke of Leinster,
Marquis of Granby,
Robert Lorraine,
Lord De Walden, Anthony Prinsep.

LOOKING back over her path of "broken hearts," pretty, vivacious, witty Marie Lohr of the English stage will "jump." By this is meant that she will jump—into matrimony.

There are a great many people interested in Marie Lohr—among whom are a few odd ducks, a prince or two, and a string of millionaires that would tempt the vanity of the prettiest girl that is any sort of a real girl at all, providing she has a heart.

Marie Lohr has held London in her grasp for several seasons. One by one she has seen the other bery marry off—Lily Elsie, the last Lily Elsie drew a plain man—so will Marie. Dukes and princes have done all well for fun and frolic and flowers and that sort of thing, but when it comes to taking to the hearthstone they pass up the dukes and take the plain man.

Marie Lohr has selected plain Anthony Prinsep. She says she is in love—that is natural—and that she will now be a dutiful wife. Not long ago a certain continental prince visited gay London and, as is natural in such cases, he was wine and dined by members of the great world. There was a box party—which is natural, too. And they were a great lot of coroneted, crowned, and jeweled women who looked down at pretty Marie Lohr from the tier of boxes.

Prince Enters the List.

The prince fell in love. He sat silently watching her as she crossed the stage. He went out of the theater a thoughtful man.

He sent flowers and called and Marie dined with him a time or two—with a chaperon—and they were good friends. Then the prince foolishly began to make love. For a while he was egged on, and then Marie Lohr said he should never see her again. Quite a shock for a prince who is used to seeing nearly anybody any time he so desires! But down came the silken foot of the vivacious Marie! Out he went.

Gossip has it that Marie Lohr has had more "desirable" marriage proposals than any girl in England. It is certain that she is one of the most notorious flirts on the English stage. Her following has always been extensive. She has been the best "material" in the world for the weary press agent. Her pathway is strewn with interesting love affairs, in which big names and bigger fortunes have played prominent parts. But, on top of all this, it is commonly acknowledged that she is one of the few English stage women of prominence who have never got into any scandal. Her broken hearts trail is strewn only with the remnants of past and done for flirtations—harmless—passing—and upon which she says she looks back with pleasure.

Marie "Daughter of the Stage."

Marie Lohr was the daughter of a more or less obscure actress—Kate Bishop. She went on the stage at 6—a heart breaker then. She was reared behind the footlights, traveling as a child with her mother on an Australian tour. She gained fame when with the Kendals.

Handsome Robert Lorraine—aviator-actor—looms up on the horizon as the man who almost married Marie Lohr. He is handsome, clever, and has gained wide fame for his campaigns in South Africa, for which he was decorated by the king. Then he went in for aerobatics and won additional honors. He was considered one of the most popular young men of London. He frequented the important drawing rooms and had many conquests, but London early cooked up a match between the beautiful actress and the daring and handsome aviator—Robert Lorraine.

Everything looked like they were right. The two seemed admirably suited to each other. The only thing that Lorraine didn't have was nobility. He was fairly well off—handsome and more or less "lionized." The gossips had it posted as one of the interesting "matches" of the season.

Then Marie fooled 'em. She has always been fooling 'em—some of 'em—dukes and earls thrown in. She never made any promises. They will tell you that. She just enjoyed their company and their gifts and when they proposed—she said she'd think about it, or, as she did with one old bachelor—so the tale goes—she knocked off his tile and put him out of her suite at the Ritz. All because the old chap had suggested marriage—and he divorced twice!

"No Man Worth Real Worry."

But the fair match between the daring South African campaigner and the beautiful stage favorite took a decidedly sudden turn. Miss Lohr called off the engagement. Lorraine had decided to become an aviator. This she would not listen to. Lorraine would not give it up. So, there you are. The match was called off. Lorraine went soaring off into the air in a military biplane and Marie Lohr went on her way without any regrets, seemingly.

"No man is worth real worry," she said to friends when the engagement was snapped, "and so I am not worrying about this turn in my affairs."

And she has kept her word. No mere man has worried her yet.

Then up bobbed brainy Lord Howard De Walden, richest peer in all England and one of the greatest "catches" in the world. London had him engaged to Marie Lohr and all waited for the announcements. De Walden, a brilliant student, essentially a man of brains, with a string of titles, the biggest town house in London, an income of almost a million a year, and reported to be handsome, too!

Snarl! went this engagement and De Walden and Marie were cold to each other in public. Why? No one seems to know. The Mrs. Grundies tried their best to find out the why, but to no avail.

De Walden seemed to pine for a while—broken hearted—more or less, and will now become the husband of Miss Van Raalte, an accomplished society girl and painter of great talent.

Anthony Prinsep is not known extremely well in the great world. But he is said to be a sensible chap—just the sort of a man a girl with loads of good sense might accept. And few doubt Marie's good sense.

Anthony Prinsep thinks he is the happiest man in England and he says that this time there will be no broken engagement. The English theatergoers are hoping that Miss Lohr will not retire after her marriage. For it is hard to lose a stage favorite, especially when she is an ingenue and beautiful and only 21.

Some of the plays in which Miss Lohr has appeared with great success are "The School for Scandal" at His Majesty's theater, in which she took the part of Lady Teazle at 18; "The Duffer," "Tantalizing Tommy," "Getting Married," "Colonel Newcombe," "Her Father," and "My Wife."

In spite of the many proposals that Miss Lohr has received and refused it must not be supposed that she is just 21. But she has had most of the eligible male element of London society at her feet since she was 17.

And during the years Miss Lohr became cleverer and more beautiful. As a child she was strong and healthy, with regular features and a rosy color, but as Marguerite, in the soft robes of that character, she stood revealed in all of her fair, ripe beauty. Her beauty was delicate and ethereal and her eyes calm and beautiful.

Miss Lohr's admirers have been many, but she has cared for few of them. Even from the first her head was not turned by the many attentions she received.

Marie Lohr, England's most winsome actress, who has taken a husband—after scorning the offers of several of London's most desirable bachelors.

SOCIETY

New Faces at Door of Society Are Written Of by Suzette

"There's a new foot on the floor, my friend,
And a new face at the door, my friend;
A new face at the door!"

THE new face is the latest arrival in the smart set. And there are more this year in the circle "newly arrived" than ever before. One hears of them in the smart sets of New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and they are much in evidence this season in Florida. We all know the well-established families of our local smart sets. Their forbears have had social prestige, and they trace an ancestry of many years back. Or perhaps they were the "arrivals" of a decade ago. Each season, brings its newer families, the ones who entertain, perhaps, or the ones in which the women are talented or specially clever. "Society" is the Mecca towards which many Americans turn longing eyes, and the ways in which they reach the citadel of their dreams is in many ways amazing and interesting.

More new names have been inscribed on New York's social register this year than ever before, and we all know that bright woman have a way of arriving in New York by way of London. A very clever writer, who has been part of the smart set of many lands, discusses this same question in the following fashion:

"It has been for years a diversion to me and a study in social strategy to watch certain American hostesses, finally established in royal favor, approach to London, the Mecca—like a play beginning in the small towns and suburbs, until it bursts upon the metropolis in the full glare and glitter of proud success—by such routes as hotels in Paris, villas on the Riviera, chalets in Switzerland, or palazzos in Venice, and from royalty, to be picked up any day on the Continent for a round of good dinners and open purse-strings—to London and Royalty.

Yet an American in England is often taken upon her own personal merit of accomplishment and charm. Equipped with a few good introductions, a respectable—or unpublished—past, an address in Mayfair or Belgrave, a few decolette gowns, not too chaste to excite envy, and half a dozen dinner party stories, and any woman is launched for the season. If she has the courage to cut every woman dead net likewise equipped and to lift her head a little higher than the most supercilious, powdered, velvet-breasted footman, she may hope to be a genuine success and to lay the foundation for delightful, life-enduring friendships. Or else the newly arrived member of the smart set betakes herself to New York, where she is received with open arms."

The aforesaid clever writer remarks naively: "After the impecunious grande dame of Italy, the decadent one of France, and the unripe one of American millions, you enjoy knowing the one of England, who is still secure."

in the possession of wealth and reputation, and whose patronizing contempt for her social inferiors is like the English lawns and lovely hedges, after centuries of careful cultivation, the finished work of art."

THERE ARE OTHER WAYS OF ARRIVING.

Of course, there are other ways of arriving besides the continental route. One may have friends who take a genuine interest in furthering one's social ambitions—though one must admit that this case is rather rare. The successful grande dame of today would much prefer that you gaze at her greatness from afar off. Half of her glory would be dimmed if most of her friends shared with her the same round of the social ladder.

But the clever woman may meet many other women who will be helpful. In her club work she may meet women worth while, and there is the wide world of philanthropy, in which most women have a mutual interest. There are civic clubs, suffrage clubs, literary clubs, all kinds of organizations in which we meet women of wealth and social position, all lending a hand to help some ambitious climber up the social scale. And with these multiplicity of influences, there are the new faces this season in the world of the socially-elect.

BRIDGE FOR MONEY—AND CIGARETTES.

There was a time when we said truthfully that none of our women friends would play bridge for money, and that we knew no women who smoked. There are still some people who might reiterate these remarkable assertions, but very few of us cling to the old ideals. We may keep them for ourselves, but we certainly do not expect to find them in our friends. The question is called again to the surface by the report that two prominent San Francisco women were asked to leave an Eastern hotel for smoking in the lobby. They are both well-known women, and this little idiosyncrasy of the after-dinner cigarette is well known to their friends. What is surprising is the fact that they were foolish enough to smoke in the crowded lobby of a large hotel. The question is rapidly coming to the fore-ground: "Does one lose social caste by playing bridge for money, or by smoking cigarettes?"

At the last analysis the wise man may tell us that there is no difference between playing cards for money or for a prize. Either way you have the element of chance. But in our hearts we know differently. Some subtle element marks the difference, and most of us will quite cheerfully play for a prize and carry it home in a sort of glorified triumph, when nothing would induce us to play cards for money. And as to smoking, we know the custom has spread with great rapidity in the smart sets of our own country. We may personally prefer to eliminate it from the list of our accomplishments, but we cannot disguise the fact that some, if not many, of our friends have a very intimate acquaintance with "My Lady Nicotine." Once again London sets the pace for us and here is a graphic and perfectly truthful word picture of society as it exists, as a development of centuries of growth:

"Grandfathers of 80 and fathers of 60 are actively and individually in London society, with or without their wives and daughters, handsome and immaculate, accomplished and witty, with their books of engagements carefully perused. Young ladies of name and position, whose families in the country do not care for town, come to London these days and take a flat or a house, with a retinue of servants, a carriage, or a motor car, to do the rounds of the season.

"Old ladies whose families have long since married and dispersed, realize at last the joys of freedom and fashion, stopping at their clubs, where you can find them at intervals between parties in the smoking-room puffing cigarettes and reading the racing news."

That is a far cry from the gentle old grandmothers of the old days, but perhaps in our hearts we like these grandmothers of the newer days far better. They refuse to grow old. They are part of the eternal youthfulness of things. "Times are changed, and we are changed with them," said the old Romans. And it may be after all, in spite of the ever-deepening cloud of cigarette smoke, that the change is for the better.

NEW YORK WRATHY AT LONDON'S SMILE.

London smiles and New York is violently indignant, and its wrath waxes hotter day by day. And all because of the attack made on its smart set by "Juvenal," an English writer. Every paper of any prominence in England has copied "Juvenal," and England is amused, and the echoes of laughter float across the seas.

But New York does not laugh. It quotes, in its turn, from "Juvenal," with an ever-rising wrath, and the bitter articles are the subject of conversation in the social limits of the smart sets on both sides of the ocean. Of course, any attack on a New York "smart set" means an attack on an American "smart set" anywhere, and some paragraphs are so vivid that it is interesting to reproduce them. Here is one, for instance:

"The society woman of New York does not know more than the society woman of London. The difference is this: The English woman begins the day by winding herself up like a clock; the American woman goes on perpetual springs, the climate keeps her wound up. The New York woman has three nerves to the English woman's one."

We are all so conscious of the frailty of poor human nature that a discussion of "wickedness" must carry a certain appeal. And here, again, "Juvenal" waxes eloquent, at our expense:

"The wickedness of Paris is intellectual and cynical; that of London is a cross between decadence and illumination; that of Berlin a mixture of Wienerwurst epicureanism and Welt-politik; that of St. Petersburg represents a Tartarian hole covered with a tarpaulin of pagan Christianity; but New York is Rome under Tiberius, Babylon during the captivity—of the intellect."

Then "Juvenal" goes on to say: "New York, en masse, does the least thinking of any place of its size that ever existed. The rag-time element is only an audible expression of the rag-tag and bob-tail element of which it is so largely composed. The motto of New York ought to be, 'Live by the day, eat when you can, dance when you please, and die when you must.'"

"New York society, as a whole, takes no interest whatever in any art or any literature. And as for music, it is considered an excellent means of creating a conversational atmosphere. African Hottentots would listen to a fine musical performance with more admiration and respect."

"Juvenal" says such a lot of things that are amusing: "There are three kinds of writers—those who write from the head, those who write from the heart, and those who write from the shoulder."

It is easy to see from where he writes, and New York just happened to stand in the way.

Poor New York! Its smart set entertained "Juvenal" and then he went home and wrote all about it, and he might have chosen for a subject "As It Appears to Me."

But what is the use of getting angry about a little thing like that. "C'est a vie"—"It is to laugh"—as

BURLINGAME ECHOES ITS DISAPPOINTMENT.

There was much disappointment at Burlingame that Ambassador and Mrs. Reid did not come to California for their usual spring outing, as all the Crockers had planned to entertain for them. Ambassador Reid has been quite ill with a very bad cold, which he caught in a singular fashion. He will be 75 in October, but he is still young in many ways, and often he forgets to be careful. Being an American, he is a lover of fresh air, and in his recent trip across the Atlantic he left his cabin window open during the second day of the voyage, which was very rough. A huge sea swept aboard, pouring in through the window and drenching everything so badly that another suite for the rest of the voyage had to be given to the ambassadorial party.

ENGLISH KEEP LENTEN STRICTER.

In England they keep the Lenten season rather more strictly than we do here in America. The season is regarded as being specially adapted to quieter forms of entertainment, as dinners and informal "at homes." The Princess Hatzfeldt (Clara Huntington) has renewed her lease of Draycott Park, Chippendale, and she has resumed her entertainments there. Among the guests at a recent week-end was Lady Cunard, who was formerly Maud Burke, the adopted daughter of Horace Carpenter, one of the pioneer founders of Oakland.

One hears that Mrs. Miller Graham is to be again in London for the coming season, and as she is very popular in the smart set of London, she will probably entertain a great deal. She will go to London accompanied by her little daughter the latter part of this month.

the French say, and any smart set is to be congratulated that is big enough to call out such a denunciation from a clever observer and a bright writer. At last we have "arrived"; the American smart set lines up with smart sets of the great capitals of the world. "Juvenal" might be doing us a favor after all.

CORYELLS PRESENT AT HOWELLS AFFAIR.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Coryell are in New York City, and they were guests at the wonderful dinner given in honor of the seventy-fifth birthday of W. D. Howells, the famous writer.

The Coryells have the most famous collection of orchids in the world, a finer collection than that of the king of England at Sandringham.

It was the beautiful home of the Coryells, with its wonderful orchids, that was the inspiration for George Sterling's exceedingly fine poem, "The House of Orchids."

MR. AND MRS. ROOS RETURN TO HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Roos of San Francisco are returning to their home across the bay after a very pleasant visit to the East. They have been gone seven weeks and their visit has been made unusually pleasant by entertainments planned for them by friends.

They are very special friends of President and Mrs. Taft and were among the honored guests at the White House at the army and navy reception, which is practically the last large social gathering of the winter. Their popular son is also an honored guest at the White House, and he has also many influential friends in Washington.

While in New York Mr. and Mrs. Roos were guests at the Plaza, and they greatly enjoyed the opera, which has been specially interesting in New York this season, with such artists as Caruso, Tetrazzini, Fremstad and Gaski in the various casts.

Mrs. Roos is very charming, most unaffected and very unspoiled by all the prosperity that has come her way. One hears that she was beautifully gowned at the White House reception, and a genuine good taste in dress is one of her characteristics. Mr. and Mrs. Roos have many friends across the bay who will be delighted to welcome them home again, for they are very fortunate in the true friendships that have come into their lives.

CONCERTS OF RUSSIAN VIOLIN VIRTUOSO AND HUGHES CLUB INTEREST MUSICIANS

Recital Will Be Held by Pupils of Prominent Teachers

Effren Zimbalist, the young Russian violin virtuoso who at the age of 20 has won a place in the very front rank of the great virtuosi, will be next musical star to visit us under the guidance of Impresario Wm. L. Greenbaum, by arrangement with H. W. Bishop of Ye Liberty playhouse.

Zimbalist graduated from the St. Petersburg Conservatory at the age of 18, and in addition to giving him a gold medal and a two years' cash scholarship the examining board wrote across his diploma in red ink the word "incomparable."

During the past four years he has been hailed by the leading critics of Europe as the true successor of Joachim, and on his first tour of America, he is meeting with triumph after triumph and his original contract for 40 concerts has grown to over 70 and the demands for his return appearances have been so enormous that he will have to return to America again next season. This rarely happens—that an artist visits the United States in two successive years.

Zimbalist possesses that genius that touches the heights and his tone is described as warm, luscious and singularly pure. Even the merest whisper of his violin is said to be as perfect as his biggest forte.

A special program will be given at Ye Liberty on Tuesday afternoon March 19, at 3:15 and it will be entirely different from any of his other concerts. The glorious "Chaconne" by Bach, the "Concerto" in E minor by Saint-Saens, a novelty in the way of a "Suite" on negro themes called "Tahiti," by Cyril Scott, a "Spanish Dance," by Sarasate and the Wilhelm Tell overture, the "Prize Song," from "Die Meistersinger," by Wagner, will be given.

Mme. Calve will shortly appear at Ye Liberty in costume scenes from her greatest operatic successes.

HUGHES CLUB CONCERT.

CHASES BOY WHO STOLE HIS PIN

His Property, and Then Relents.

CINCINNATI, March 9.—Ralph E. Hutchins, Olive Hill, Ky., was standing in a crowd at Sixth street and Main street yesterday when he suddenly felt a violent tug at his necktie. He turned around, he saw a boy pushing his way through the crowd with his valuable stickpin clutched in his right hand. Hutchins took after the youth, who ran into a store at East Main street. Hutchins followed and grabbed the boy by the back of the neck. Sergeant Doyle appeared on the scene and placed the boy under arrest.

At the Second district he registered as 16 years old. Hutchins followed the officer and his prisoner to the station, and after recovering his pin refused to prosecute young Stiers. The police say Hutchins' condition was such that it was found necessary to lock him up for safekeeping. Stiers is being held for the juvenile court.

THEIR ROB ROOM.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The room of Mrs. L. Olive of 622 Clay street was ransacked by sneak thieves this morning and valuables to the amount of $57 taken.

F. A. Woodward, with Miss Walton as accomplice.

In case of inclement weather, the concert will not be given.

Miss Jenkins' School of Music in this city is rapidly earning a reputation through the work done by the pupils who are taught a system of harmony made interesting to children, and cultivating music consciousness from the beginning of their study.

Not the least part of the activity of the school is the training of young men and women to be teachers. This is Miss Jenkins' own work and she has turned out some very successful teachers, both in public school music and in private teaching. Miss Jenkins has brought together instructions of a superior caliber, including Mrs. Grace Davis Northrup and Percy Dow, in the vocal department; George Kruger and Miss Belle Miller, both concert pianists; Samuel Savannah, whose reputation as violinist and director of ensemble work is well established; Dr. Arthur Weiss and Mr. de Gomez in charge of the cello, and Louis Newbauer, flute.

On the evening of May 24 and the afternoon of the 25th, the closing exercises for this year will be held and a children's opera will be given.

MISS JENKINS' SCHOOL.

On Tuesday, March 26, an evening of music will be given at Harmon Gymnasium on the Berkeley campus by the Women's Mandolin and Guitarr Club of the University of California. This organization has done good work in the past, and the concert is being pleasantly anticipated.

The half hour of music in the Hearst Greek Theater this afternoon will be given by the choir of the First Baptist church of Berkeley. The following program will be given:

Pinnell's "Eldorado," by the choir; the aria, "Ah, fors'ell," from Verdi's "La Traviata," Miss Millington Taylor, soprano soloist; "Die Lotosen," from Gounod's "Faust," Robert D. Moore, baritone soloist; Nivins' "Daybreak," by the choir; "The Sweet of the Year," an Irish spring song by Needham, Miss Talbot; Hermann Lohr's "My Ships That Went a-Sailing," Mr. Moore; the duet from Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Miss Taylor and Mr. Moore; Gounod's "Benedictus," by the choir, with the tenor solo by C. L. Custer, and Schubert's "The Omnipotence," by the choir, with the soprano solo by Miss Talbot.

The choir, which consists of thirty selected voices, is under the leadership of riage of her daughter, Anna, to Mr. Frederick Goodchild on Thursday, the 7th of March.

One hears that charming Anna Poston made a very beautiful young bride. She is very sweet and attractive, and the traveling gown in which she was married was very perfectly planned and was most becoming. It was of gray tulle, and the hat to match the gown was covered with flowers and was most becoming. Mr. Goodchild is much older than his bride, but in this case it does not matter, for Anna Poston, though being young in years, was always a very thoughtful girl. She has been splendidly educated and has a fine mind, so only someone of culture and of a wide horizon would appeal to her.

Mr. Goodchild is a very distinguished Englishman, who has large business interests in Mexico and England. The Goodchilds will spend some time in Mazatlan, and they are planning, after two or three years, to make their permanent home in London. It is with great regret that Mrs. Goodchild's friends learn that her home is to be so far away. We can ill afford to lose so sweet and charming a young matron.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR EASTER FETES.

In accordance with our ever-growing custom of giving gifts to each other, everyone is making preparations for the Easter festivities. Out in Bermuda the wonderful Easter lilies are growing, which will bloom later in great New York. Our own ascension lilies are beginning to bloom, and on all sides one's friends are preparing the lovely gifts which will be sent with a flower or with the typical Easter eggs. We are only following out well-established traditions of older lands, when in all the smart sets wonderful Easter gifts are exchanged. In Russia it is usually eggs which are sent and the imperial family sets the example in sending each other jeweled eggs.

The czarina has a wonderful collection of Easter eggs. Upon the Easter of his coronation the czar gave her an egg of yellow enamel, the coronation color, the jeweled diadem in which she was crowned reproduced in miniature at the top, while inside the egg was a perfect copy of the coronation carriage she used in making her state entry into Moscow, made of gold and red enamel, with red velvet seats, a beautifully hand-painted door to "open and shut and gold wheels to turn round. Another year the egg was decorated with roses formed of diamonds and lilies of the valley in pearls, while a tiny spring hidden under a ruby brought out the miniatures of the czar and the children.

There is a certain fascination in planning gifts which may be Easter surprises, which may bring a loving thought to a friend. We cannot all plan wonderful Easter eggs such as are owned by the czarina, but we live in a land where flowers may be had almost for the asking, and all that our gift-giving requires of us is a little time and thought. And so it happens that among the social activities of the early spring the Lenten sewing bees have a prominent place.

CALIFORNIA SMART SET IS RESTING.

As compared with other smart sets, the California contingent is comparatively quiet, very few entertainments scoring high along the line of originality. Down at Palm Beach, at the "Royal Poinciana," there are 2000 guests, and a ball given last week is notable in the history of entertainments in our country. Many dinners preceded the ball, which did not begin much before midnight, and dancing lasted till morning. The decorations were remarkably effective. Twenty-five thousand roses were used and over half a mile of laurel wreathing and there were quantities of other greens and of flags.

A few days ago in Florida Robert Collier was host at one of the first aviation luncheons ever given. It took place at his houseboat on Lake Worth. Mr. Collier went up in the aeroplane and swift motor-boats on the lake accompanied him.

Later, Mr. Collier's mother and wife went up in the aeroplane, and Mrs. John Shepard of Boston also took a sprint up in the clouds after the notable luncheon.

Other entertainments along original lines have been given by Chester Arthur, the son of our late President Arthur and a young man whom his intimate friends all call "Dearest." He explains the way he happened to achieve so endearing an appellation. "When I went to Princeton my father, who took me there, was asked to address the freshmen class. When concluding he referred to me and the British Isles, and the Continent. A merry crowd of friends assembled at the station to bid them farewell and the travelers were showered with books and candies.

SEWING GUILD.

Mrs. John Francis Smith will entertain the sewing guild of St. Leo's parish at her Piedmont home every Tuesday in Lent.

head of the cabinet speeding along Lake Worth on a bicycle with seat high, handle bars low and the rider's feet revolving with a whirl.

It will be interesting to our golfers to learn that Mr. Knox's game is very good indeed. He goes around the links as a rule under 90, and his latest card was 84, enough, to give a good drubbing to any antagonist.

The early spring days are passing in a round of activities in the east and south, marked with originality and with planning along unique lines. As we often copy from our neighbors of the east and south, perhaps in the not distant future some hostess may send out her cards for a social date with the important word, "aviation," engraved in one corner.

MANY AFFAIRS FOR JOHN MCCORMACK.

Many complimentary affairs were arranged in honor of John McCormack, the well-known Irish tenor, whose wonderful voice delighted and charmed so many people across the bay. A delightful tea was given in his honor at the Burlingame Country Club, Miss Mary Helen Carlisle, the well-known artist, being the hostess of the day. The visitors motored down to the peninsula, and those invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. McCormack were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crocker, Lewis Hobart, Mrs. Howard Colt, Mr. and Mrs. James Ellis Tucker, Mrs. Florence Porter Finest, Miss Dorothy Spring, Miss Ethel Crocker, Raphael Well, Henry Hadley, Edmund Beel and Spencer Clay. Later in the day the William Crockers entertained the guests at New Place, their Burlingame home.

Miss Carlisle and Miss Arundel have been spending the winter at the Fairmont, and they gave an informal tea last week for Miss Dorothy Spinney, who gives very delightful interpretations of modern drama.

MISS LUCY STEBBINS IS GUEST OF HONOR.

One of the most elaborate of the recent luncheons was that given at the Town and Country Club at Burlingame by Mrs. George Edward Crothers, who was formerly Miss Elizabeth Mills.

Mrs. Crothers made her guest of honor, Miss Lucy Stebbins, who is a daughter of the late Rev. Horatio Stebbins, formerly one of the best known clergymen on the coast. Miss Stebbins recently returned from the east, where she has been attending the leading colleges.

The table was a lovely study in spring blossoms, and among those invited to meet Miss Stebbins were:

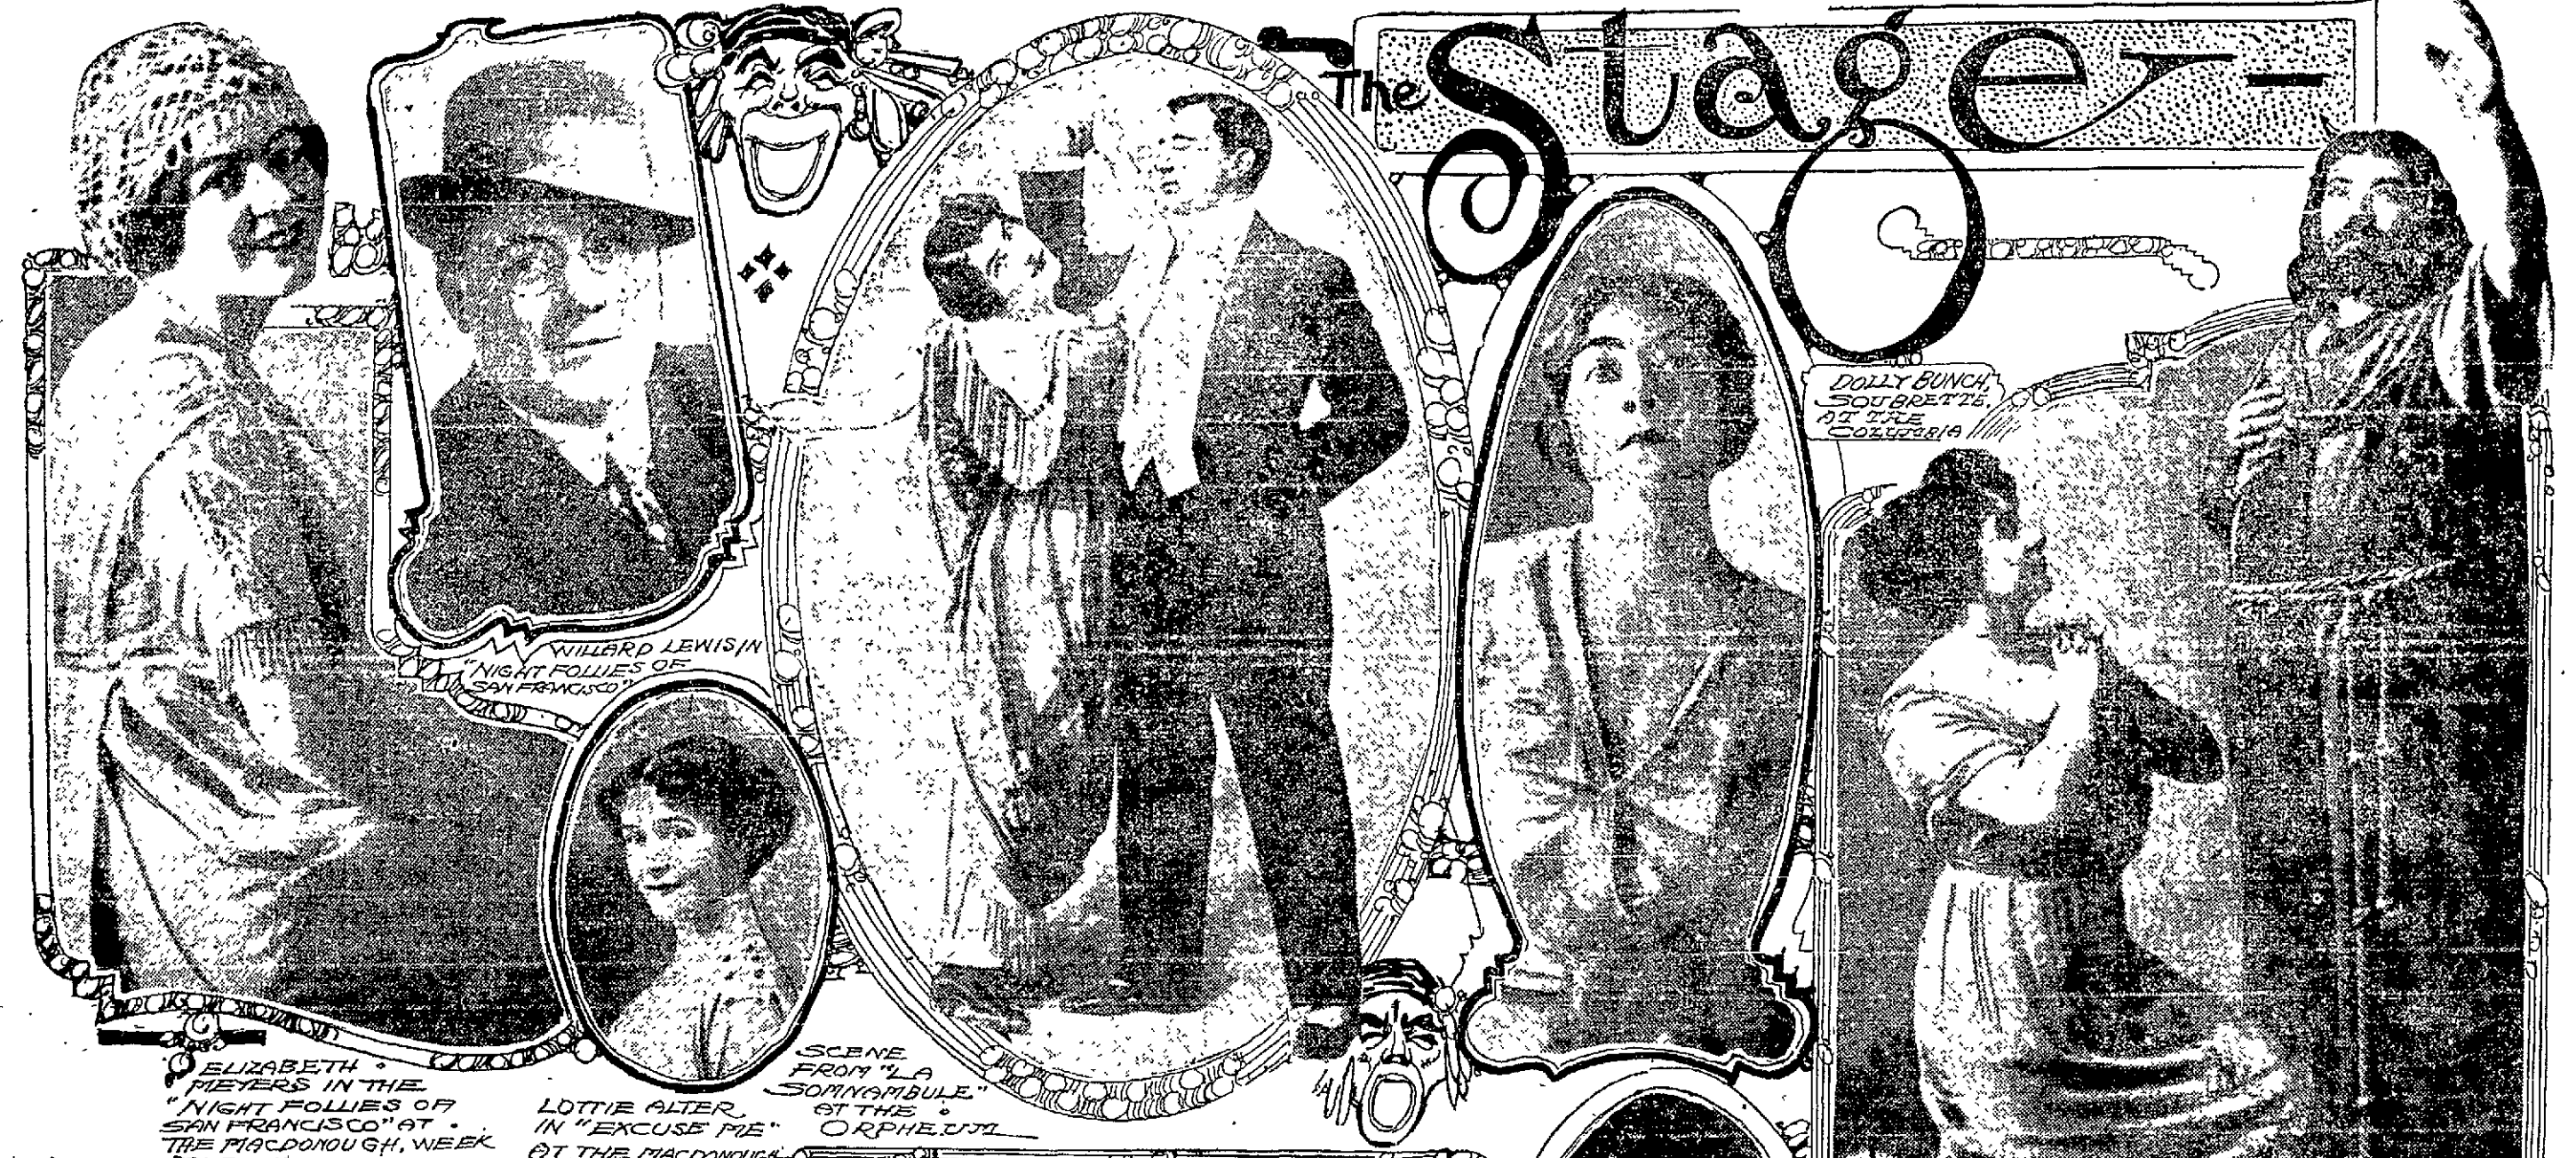

Mrs. William H. Mills, Mrs. W. W. Douglas, Mrs. Adolph Graupner, Mrs. F. H. Stanwood, Mrs. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Mrs. Charles Bentley (Florence Hush), Mrs. Frank Miller, Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mrs. Russell Selfridge (Grace Baldwin), Mrs. W. H. Scharr, Mrs. Bradford Leavitt, Mrs. Horatio Stebbins Jr., Mrs. Charles Alken, Dr. Millicent Cosgrave, Miss Ethel Moore, Miss Elsie Sherman and Miss Carol Day.

MRS. HEARST'S DINNER IMPORTANT AFFAIR.

Among the interesting dinners of the week across the bay was that given by Mrs. Hearst, who entertained at dinner at the Fairmont. Her guest of honor was General Baden Powell, the distinguished Englishman who established such a fine record in the Boer war in South Africa.

General Baden Powell was here only for a few days and he could accept only a few of the hospitalities planned for him, but he promises to return for our great exposition of 1915.

MACDONOUGH

In presenting the musical extravaganza, "Night Follies of San Francisco," the management of the Macdonough theater wish to inform their many patrons that they have secured for this entire week one of the big novelties of the present season. The production is said to be one of the most complete. The scenic embellishments, the musical settings and costumes have all been prepared by masters in their various crafts. This company of forty of the most capable vaudeville performers in the country, together with a dashing and beautiful chorus of pretty girls who can sing and dance make up an ensemble of clever entertainers.

As the name implies, "Night Follies of San Francisco" is a series of scenes depicting life in San Francisco, which, as many may know, has no parallel in any other city in the world. The play is in three scenes, the first being a life-like representation of Grant Avenue and Market street. Here the tourists, who are making their way through the city under the direction of a guide; later they are taken to Chinatown, where they fall in with a jolly crowd of Berkeley students, and finally in the third scene they are taken to the well known local and country dancing party.

The touring party consists of a German, Herman Gosselens, a young student, Molly, a young student, and several of his friends. They get separated during the dancing tour, and a number of very amusing situations result. Briefly told, the "Night Follies of San Francisco" contains all the happenings which might occur in any large city where there is a large crowd of people.

"Excuse Me," which product of the "Excuse Me" pen Henry W. Savage, is on at the Macdonough on March 10, 11 and 12, and which is variously described as "an apologetic farce" and "a musical extravaganza," all of its scenes being based on an overland limited train on route from Chicago to San Francisco, a compilation, guaranteed genuine, blowing the bottle hole up is one of the features. With a grinding of wheels as the train is thrown on, the rattling of wheels and jerking of coaches which would be incidental to the sudden stopping of a transcontinental flyer, the train comes to a halt. The passengers of the train are in view at the moment jump out of the train and seek the coach with the intention of learning the cause of this sudden stop. A moment later they retreat into the body of the train, after the alarming information that the train is being "held up."

ORPHEUM

Louise Dresser, favorite of vaudeville and student of many musical comedies, is the headliner of the new bill at the Orpheum, beginning with this afternoon. It is only for a short time that Miss Dresser, who is a sister of the late Paul Dresser, the famous song

WORDS AND SENTENCES CONCERNING PERSONS AND THINGS THEATRICAL

SOMEWHERE, some time, somewhere they all feel the same, these dramatists. Now it is Arthur Wing Pinero in whose back there is a dent, brought by a weapon in the hands of New York's critics.

"Preserving Mr. Pinero" seems to have done Pinero a bad turn. They staged it in New York the other day, with a competent cast and the result was a fiasco. For instance, there was a scene in which Pinero was to the extent of a column thus:

"Kiss me have been held responsible for all sorts of things from tragedy to all-moody since time immemorial, but never was a kiss so strained to the breaking point as that particular kiss of John Pinero, J. P., brusquely laid upon the lips of Josephine Quarendon, the Pinero's pretty young governess. This kiss will become historical for one reason only. It is the pivot upon which Mr. Arthur Wing Pinero, that past master of dramatic construction and we are not quite sure that in this instance the adjective 'past' does not apply in a double sense, has hung the stupider play that he has ever written. After seeing 'Preserving Mr. Pinero' it is easy to realize why all the English stars from Sir Herbert Beerhohn Tree, up or down as you like, are hustling themselves into the music halls as fast as their legs and art can carry them. And is that all? It is not. Here is more:

"Here was the man who wrote 'Tanqueray,' 'Iris,' 'Quez' and 'The Squire,' to say nothing of those glorious comedies like 'Daddy Dick,' 'Sweet Lavender,' and 'The Amazons' debasing his art, and himself, by turning out a play so strained and artificial, so motiveless and untrue to life, that even a small boy could not be induced to swallow it if it was handed to him in a spoon and delftly covered with tea cream—play in which not one human note was struck and in which not one character, not even the heroine, was permitted to act like a human being. What Mr. Pinero's grudge against the British nation is we do not know, but it must be a deep-rooted one, because for many seasons now he has devoted all his time and all his genius—and Pinero is a genius, even if he would insist upon perpetrating 'Preserving Mr. Pinero'—to depicting in the most brutal manner as his command the most uninteresting, the most sordid, vulgar and despicable types which the brain of any dramatist could conceive."

And thus go they all. Sooner or later Shakespeare would have done something to displease the censor, had he lived long enough in an age when there were newspapers and men wrote plays for money.

LIL COULDN'T DO BETTER.

And just when we would say words of joy over the coming of Louise Dresser, today we discover there's two things to discuss, and two only. What's a man to do when one of his is the happy way she sang "Take a Look at Me Now" when she was in Oakland last?

There's only this: Lil Russell stuff to chat about, so here goes. The male contingent may now turn to the sporting pages; this is for the benefit of those who haven't voted—yet.

When you see Louise Dresser, say we wonder how it can be possible for a fat woman would want to roll or convulse to banish the "too, too, solid" when plumpness is so pleasing. For she is plump, frankly plump, in the Dresser's but nothing more than plump and her amplitude is charming. And yet, my dear, we have seen women who tip the scales in tune to Louise who would be called fat. And why? Let the actress, herself, answer:

"Because of the way in which they dress. They will not allow you to forget that they are, well—er plump. They wear their corsets too tight, their gowns too tight, their shoes too tight, their gloves too tight, their hats too tight. These corsets and suppress until you can't help noticing that there is something to squeeze and suppress. While I never, under any circumstances, wear anything that is tight, and, let me tell you, I wear the tightest corset, too tight to button, according to dressmakers' notions, and as a result I have straight lines and comfort."

"Of one thing I am extremely careful, and it is not to wear anything that is too tight to button, and I have a line from waist to foot and will not have it destroyed, and—"

And, take a look at her now.

Phew! Lilian, O, I say, Lilian, you may have your desk now; we're through with it.

Corsets and waistlines! That we should have unblushingly mentioned 'em for water, Alfred!

BUTLER WAS SCARLET.

vorites coming into their own again. Here is Herbert Kealey, gotten by the most of us who never knew him in the days of Frohman's Lyceum stock company, scoring a Chicago production of Pinero's "The Thunderbolt." Says the critic: "The old Mr. Kealey looms up with a bold, dominant example of characterization upon which the much abused adjective 'great' can almost be bestowed."

Nat Goodwin, too, as Fagin in "Oliver Twist," gave New York a blow in memory of the coming of Louise Dresser, today we discover there's two things to discuss, and two only. What's a man to do when one of his is the happy way she sang "Take a Look at Me Now" when she was in Oakland last?

BUTLER WAS SCARLET.

This is a yarn that has gone the rounds, presumably because it is perfectly true. It happened at the Alcazar, across the bay. Evelyn Vaughan as Helena Ritchie was in the midst of one of her pathetic speeches, delivered with tears and sob at each and every matinee, when bedlam broke loose above.

From the rafters came a chorus of humps and an assortment of shuffles. The audience grew nervous. All matinee audiences, being of feminine gender, are nervous, anyhow, but this one was pumped into the fidgets. Miss Vaughan stayed with the ship and recited her lines to the tune of the noise from above.

Then there burst forth on the quivering air the plankety-plank of a piano. It was a perfectly good piano, but it was indulging in rattle and that started the giggles. The actress gave up in disgust and Stage Manager Butler started for the scene of the disturbance in a hurry, while a patient audience did its utmost to maintain proper decorum and a kindly interest in what Helena Ritchie was doing for her country.

Butler located the source of the trouble in the auditorium of his dramatic school, on the second floor of the Alcazar building. Some of the daughters of our best families, hither by the stage and attending the academy, had been left alone with a piano for a few minutes.

Drawing you a picture of a dozen kittenish girls with regatta natures and nothing better to think about, we will leave you to figure the result for yourself. Thanking you one and all for your kind attention—way harmonize with you and respond to you. You are the first violin in an orchestra, so to say, and the rest should follow your tempo. That is why leading actors in France nearly always direct the plays in which they appear.

"It seems to me a very satisfactory arrangement. Actors are highly responsive and quick to catch methods of expression, both of character and feeling, which are shown to them. I have certainly found my fellow players in America very responsive to my coaching. They have caught my meaning often when I could not have told them myself what I meant. But I could show them, you see. Why," laughed Mme. Simone, "they even got to talking with their hands the way I do. There was great deal of joking among us about that."

Although Mme. Simone has so little fondness for exercise or outdoor sports that even to walk two city blocks would be an effort she could not make, she is a most energetic person. Here, there and everywhere she hurries about watching and listening to every move and word, encouraging this player, showing another the proper use of a prop, and in every way, she is all fire and enthusiasm and fills a stage full of people with ambition.

There are many things which might be said in support of the combination of actor and stage director, not the least of them being that one who works over the staging of a play is likely to be ambitious for the merit of the whole thing and not only for the parts in which he or she appears. Mme. Simone has certainly shown that her ambition is for the artistic perfection of the whole play and artistic perfection of its details, even when these things go toward calling attention from her own parts.

Mme. Simone, however, is in many ways unusual, and in none of them more so than in the fact that when off the stage she is not an actress.

On March 11 and 12, 1912, Richards and Pringle's Georgia Minstrels were appearing at the Oakland theater. The company was headed by Billy Kersands and included Tom Brown and the Merry Brothers. The featured player last year, Will Eldridge, "the little soon," and Jim Crosby, "aged darkey delineator."

When "Mme. X," the emotional success of last season, is seen here again shortly the title role will be portrayed again by Adeline Dunlap, seen here as the featured player last year. Previous to her emotional work in this play Miss Dunlap was seen in comedy, including among other roles that of the athletic girl, "Dessie Tanner," in George Ade's "College Widow" on its first visit to the coast some six years ago.

Frank Keenan, who will be seen soon at the Orpheum in a sketch called "Man to Man," was the originator of the role of the cherub, "Jack Ralston," in Eugene O'Neill's production of "The Girl of the Golden West."

"Alas Jimmy Valentine," which was the hit at Lyceum, has been seen here on the Oakland during the past four months. The first time was at the Macdonough, with H. B. Warner, the creator of the role, as the star, and the second time only a few weeks back at the Liberty.

Blanche Bates, star of "Nobody's Widow," the clever comedy which David Belasco will present at the Macdonough shortly, was seen here as the featured player last year. She is a nationally clever company, including Bruce McRae as leading man. Others will be Adelaide Prince, wife of the late Creighton Clark; Rex McDonald, seen here with John Drew in "My Wife," and Betty Jackson.

Alma James, widow of Louis James, the eminent tragedian, will be seen soon at the Orpheum in a sketch by Arthur Hopkins. Mrs. James supported her husband for many years in his various Shakespearean ventures.

Robert Richards, who has one of the leading roles in "Excuse Me," to be at the Macdonough in a few days, has been seen on the stage in the important productions within recent years. She supported Eleanor Robson in "Merely May Ann" some seven years ago, was the "temperamental prima donna" with Lillian Russell in "The Butterfly" five years ago and was then seen in "The Thief," with Margaret Illington and Bruce McRae about a year later.

Ursula St. George, who has the leading role in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," has been on the stage only about two years, having made her first appearance in the original production of Maurice Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird" in New York.

Arthur Byron, remembered here for his performance of "Jacques" with Maude Adams in her special performance of "As You Like It" at the Greek theater two or three years ago, and the season leading man for May Irwin in her new farce, "She Knows Better Now," the play has been announced for production on the coast during the season.

Gertrude Elliott, sister of the beautiful Maxine, and herself seen here a few months back in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," has a new play in New York. It is "Preserving Mr. Pinero" and is the latest play from the pen of Arthur Wing Pinero. Chief in support of the star is Isabel Irving, recently seen here with John Drew in "Smith."

"Lady Patricia" is the new play in which Mrs. Fiske is starring, supported by Henry Stephenson and Cyril Young. The play is a comedy bordering on farce and was done in London with Mrs. Fiske in the title role. The boy Ed Campbell secured from Graham Moffat, author of "When Buntly Pulls the Strings," a one act play called "Concealed Bud." The little comedy is now being played by a Scotch company at the London Pavilion and will be brought to America intact for the Orpheum circuit.

The two youthful prodigies, David Schooner and Louise Dickinson will immediately begin a vaudeville tour. Master Schooner is a little fellow, a boy of seven and a half, and that great master himself predicted for that young a brilliant musical future. Miss Dickinson is a petite young miss with an exceptionally high soprano voice.

The report that Blanche Walsh has cancelled her vaudeville bookings and will return to the dramatic stage is absolutely without foundation. A prominent manager attempt to induce Mrs. Walsh to cancel her present contract and start in a new play. This, however, she refused to do, and will appear over the Orpheum circuit in Arthur Hopkins' intense playlet "The Thunder Gods."

Ray L. Boyce, the eccentric comedian, has returned to vaudeville. His monologue of eccentric character sketches was one of the delights of vaudeville and his manner will undoubtedly be looked to with expectant pride.

Terminating his world's tour, Bert Trel, the yodling comedian will be seen on the Orpheum circuit. In a recent reference to him, the London press declared that he was "the best vocalist on the Music Hall stage." Trel is not a comedian, who can bring claim to being his superior in the freshness and quality of voice.

Oliver Morosco, the well known Los Angeles manager, has made his latest production, "The Truth Wagon," in New York with what appears to be prospects of a long run. The cast is made up of all the stars of the coast, including Max Fisman, Harry Mestayer, recently juvenile at the Alcazar in San Francisco and a former member of the company at the Liberty. Antonette Walker, seen here with Nance O'Neill in "The Lily," is certainly not a comedienne, who can bring claim to being his superior in the freshness and quality of voice.

Lillian Albertson was compelled to leave the coast of "The Lily" at a place in the Harris Theater, New York, Saturday night. Miss Albertson has been in New York for some time. Christine Norman has succeeded her in the role of Kate Lenox, the talker.

Rose Stahl will be seen at the Garrick Theater, Philadelphia, on Monday, March 11. She will finish her season there.

Henry B. Harris, who left for Europe last week, will spend several days at the Alcazar, conferring with Edwin Selwyn about his new play, which will be produced in New York early in September.

NEW YORK THEATER-MAD

Every piece of vacant property between Forty-second street and Fifty-ninth, Sixth avenue and Eighth avenue, in New York, sooner or later will be a site for a theater. If the present rush to build-playhouses keeps up.

When the theatrical season opens on Labor Day, there will be twelve playhouses to open their doors for the first time. New York has gone theater-building mad. As one prominent theatrical manager aptly expressed it the other day in discussing this subject: "If theater were a Wall Street proposition, the man who would go short on them would clean up a fortune."

The burning question of the hour among managers is: "Where are we going to get the plays to fill all our theaters?" Notwithstanding the enormous population of New York City, and the tremendous number of transients—estimated at 150,000—a city that will not be enough theaters to fill all the theaters on the island of Manhattan.

The effect of the increase in the number of playhouses in New York City will be watched with interest. A number of theaters owned in New York, who heretofore have kept out of the producing end of the game, will now be compelled to be producers in order to fill their houses. No doubt it will stimulate greatly activity among playwrights, and many plays that were turned down in the past will now come to light, and the theater owner, in desperation, will give them a chance.

"I venture to make the prediction," said a well known theatrical manager, "that within a few years the number of failures over seen in New York, because of the large number of theaters, for which plays will have to be produced."

When Oakland's New Theater Was Started

Twenty years ago today, March 10, 1892, an historic event in Oakland took place. It was the laying of the cornerstone of a new theater the Macdonough of today. In THE TRIBUNE of that date the day following appeared a lengthy account of the ceremonies which make interesting reading in the light of subsequent events.

The cornerstone was laid at 3 in the afternoon under the auspices of Oakland Lodge No. 171, B. P. O. E. with elaborate attendant exercises. Frederick Warde, the noted tragedian, who was appearing in San Francisco on the drama, Music was furnished by the singers of the Heinrich Cornick, comic opera company and by the Fifth Infantry band, while Mayor M. C. Chapman and other officials of the city graced the occasion with their presence.

The exalted ruler of the Elks at that time, George E. De Golia, presided over the program, which was in full as follows:

Music by the Fifth Infantry band.

Introductory address by George E. De Golia.

Invocation, Chaplain George A. Matson.

Placing articles in the box of the cornerstone.

Ritual of the order, accompanying the lowering the stone into place.

Music, solo from "Ermann" by Marfat of the Cornick comic opera company, assisted by full chorus of fifty voices.

Male quartet, Dudley Backus of "Annie Laurie," by members of the Cornick company.

Oration, Frederick Warde. In the course of his remarks Warde outlined in brief the development of the drama from the earliest times down to the present day. He spoke particularly of "the greatest of arts," as he characterized it, as it had been exercised in California, particularly at the old California theater in San Francisco.

"With its fame were inseparably associated," Warde declared, "the names of John McCullough and Lawrence Barrett, men who did more for the stage in California than any other two who ever lived."

In concluding Warde said: "I hope some day it may be my good fortune to appear on the stage of this new theater and illustrate to you some of the men of the present and past."

Warde's most recent appearance here was only a few months ago when he played a comedy engagement in "Julius Caesar" and "Virginius" to small audiences, commenting sadly, in a curtain speech on the opening night on the small attendance and on the high hopes for the support of Shakespeare and the classics which he had held when, twenty years before, he had assisted at the first ceremonies connected with the theater.

Chronology of Stage Gathered for March

Should An Opera Singer Marry?

NO!

Says Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink—
AND A PRACTICAL
HOUSEKEEPER, Who Has—Several Times—and Who Says That Matrimony Makes a Singer Greater.

By MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK.

I was my love for my children that gave me the energy and the will power to reach success in my profession. My children, my love for them, the desire to place them in more desirable circumstances, to protect them from poverty and care—this was the motive power for my career. During the first years of my operatic work I drank deeply from the cup of sorrow and bitterness and poverty. I had four children, August, Lottchen, Heinrich, and Hans, aged 6 months to 4 years. My salary at that time was less than $900 a year.

I did the cooking, washing, sewing, and everything else, as I was too poor to afford a servant. Before going to the theater I would lock the children in, so that they might not wander away and come to harm; but often during performances I would be terror stricken by the thought that fire might break out and the little ones be burned.

I take great pride even now in my housekeeping. My home is furnished simply, because to my mind that is the most artistic and beautiful. I like everything speckless, and the children soon learn each one to take care of his own things.

I have little time for society—that is, in the way of making it an object in life. I am always busy, busy. A woman with eight children must be practical. So my ideals are all for art and my home and my children. I don't even have time to shop—not in the way American women enjoy it.

I have never delegated the care of my children to a nurse, and none of them has been brought up on bottles.

The happiest hours of my life are with my children. I am compelled to be here and there, away from them, during the winter season, and it is with a heart overflowing with love that I hasten every spring to my home at Singac, N. J., where they are awaiting me.

They are my inspiration while I am "on the road." The tears come to my eyes when I am thousands of miles from home, and I often think that I would not have had the heart to carry on my work in the face of all the discouragement and disappointments had it not been for them.

When the hours were darkest and it seemed as if I must give up the struggle one look into their innocent, trusting eyes would give me courage, and I could go bravely on. They were my incentive at all times in my career. Success did not come to me early and the fight was a long and hard one, but my love for my children strengthened my will and helped me to overcome all obstacles.

I never have considered my children a hindrance in any way.

I am first a mother, and then I am an artist!

I studied roles and arias seated at the piano, the children playing around me. I memorized parts while standing at the oil stove cooking our simple meal or while busy at the wash tub. I brought up my children, and they were my comfort and my support.

Says Pretty Geraldine Farrar, WHO NEVER HAS AND WHO SAYS SHE WON'T—at Least for a While—Though She's Had a Dozen Tempting Offers in Her Operatic Career.

By GERALDINE FARRAR

NEVER have been married and never intend to be. I'm going to remain a stanch New England spinster and never change my name!

The idea of matrimony never has entered into my plans.

Real home life is scarcely compatible with an operatic career. My art has absorbed me from the first, and when I must choose between that and something else I always give my art the first consideration.

I will not deny that I continually receive letters from eligible young men, some of them occupying luxurious positions, but I never have yet met such a man whose company interested me for more than twenty minutes. After that they begin to make love, and that is foolish.

Mere flirtation I consider contemptible. There are opera singers who encourage the attentions of men, get all they can from them, and then throw them away like a sucked orange. Such conduct is abominable and degrading.

I am heart whole and fancy free. What could a man offer me? I have ambition. I am swallowed up in my music. I want a broad fame, and the dollars that broad fame brings with it, more than I want a home and a family.

There are none too many good mothers in this world, and far be it from me to belittle them; but I despise a person who tries to do everything, and my bent runs toward music.

I have no desire to be accounted domestic, and to have a reputation for being able to make pies. Maybe when I retire I will think of marriage, not before.

Some opera singers seem to have husbands and get along well enough, but so long as I feel that my operatic career would be ruined by a husband I never shall marry. I certainly feel that way now, and no man yet has been able to convince me to the contrary.

I have yet to find the man who combines the qualities which I would require in a husband, and really I think if I should find him I should be terribly disappointed, for then my career would be finished. For it is incompatible with an artistic career—a husband and domesticity. And the idea of marrying to lug a husband around the country with you on tours is perfectly absurd.

I don't want a husband; I am not thinking of a husband; my entire idea of life is to be an artist—to sing, to act. It compensates for all I lose in not being a wife. And there is no doubt that art is a terrible taskmaster.

I feel that I was given my voice for a purpose and would not be doing my part in the world were I to think entirely of my own personal happiness; for while there is great satisfaction in a public career where you feel your audience is in sympathy and is enjoying what you are giving them, the life is a hard and remorseless one.

THE SAD, SAD STORY OF—The Most Topsy-Turvy Honeymoon Ever!

A POLYGLUT empire is no place in which to take a honeymoon. Among those who know are the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary and his wife, the Princess of Parma. They're just finished having the most gloriously topsy-turvy wedding trip on record—and they're tired of the thing. It might not have been so bad if the emperor, whom the archduke stands some time to succeed, perhaps, had not taken such an interest. But he did. Further than that, he's continuing to take an interest and keeps on getting more enthusiastic all the time. When the archduke and the princess were married, not long ago, they planned to have a honeymoon that would be worth thinking about. There are many countries which recognize the emperor as ruler. Every one of them would be visited. There'd be love and mountain walks and climbs up to the tumbled stone ruins of age-worn castles, where they would sit and say soft, talky nothings to each other. It would be a heaven of a honeymoon. But—thing went wrong. All those beautiful plans took dirgibles and sailed away. The baggage got lost, the train wasn't the right one, the guard forgot to let them out at the proper place so they could sneak into town. And at the first village the archduke and his bride bumped into exactly what they had sought to avoid—a deputation of the honorable citizens.

Price Royalty Must Pay.

There was a band, a line of knee bending, comic opera soldiers who jabbed their swords into the air in salute, rammed their necks into stiffer militarism, right wheeled, left wheeled, countermarched, and did everything the rule books ever mentioned, while the High Cadocey of the township dug the archduke in the ribs (theoretically, of course) and asked him how he liked it.

At last they broke away. They sought their hotel. Ten minutes later a band began to serenade them. The lobby filled with admiring citizens. The new groom took one look at the eager mob outside and then turned to his bride.

"Let's get out of this," he urged, frantically.

They tried and failed. The citizens had surrounded the hotel, waving flags, shouting, calling for the presence of the archduke and his consort.

"Speech!" shouted the multitude. "Thunderation!" grunted the archduke, under his breath.

Welcome Entirely Too Strenuous.

But the speech was made. As quickly as possible the bride and groom fled. The next town had the same to offer, more soldiers more prominent citizens bearing gifts, more band, more excitement. A third town, a fourth, a fifth. It was beginning to get on the groom's nerves.

A sixth town. A seventh. Those ruined castles and that beautiful, quiet honeymoon were further off than ever. Instead of getting better, things got worse. When the archduke and his wife left one of the small towns for another, half the town from which the departure was made got on the train and went along to help the next village in its ferid welcome.

Now and then, in the rare moments of quiet, the poor archduke would endeavor to tell his new wife how much he loved her. The effort was useless. All his parched, hoarse throat could croak forth was:

"Gentlemen and beloved subjects, it gives me much pleasure to—"

Which wasn't the thing to say at all.

However, there came an ending to it all. There arrived one day the necessity of responding to that ceaseless stream of deputations and the archduke rose to do so. He may have said what he thought. He may merely have made a few mistakes. But when he got through with his little speech he had uttered things about a neighboring country and a neighboring town which shouldn't have been said at all. Beyond the fact that the statements were wrong, absolutely without reason, and not at all true, they didn't make a hit.

Little Token of Esteem.

Three days later Mr. and Mrs. Hon. Archduke received word that the emperor had sent them a trifling little token of his esteem and regard. It came in the form of a royal message and an express package. The letter stated, calmly, that before the archduke made any more mixed up, uncalled for, unreliable speeches like that one just perpetrated he'd better get a little information on the subject. Therefore, under separate cover, were being sent the history and life stories of the men and tongues and cities of Austria-Hungary, Bohemia, Croatia, Slavonia, Bosnia, Galicia, Moravia, Dalmatia, and Herzegovina.

And thus the honeymoon that was to have been an epic in the world of love bounced against a solid brick wall and flattened its nose. The archduke and his consort went into retirement, in which they struggled hour after hour with unpronounceable names of towns, learned how men they never had heard of stubbed their toes when they were children, went to school, and fell in love, and then died. They talked languages ten minutes at a time. Croatia now, Dalmatian in a few minutes, Herzegovinian after that.

The Card Players Face

There Is More Hatred Engendered, More Wrought Nerves, More Distorted Faces and More Wrinkles Caused by Card Playing Than Any Other Vice—Says

Lillian Russell

The average card player's face assumes a hard, cruel expression that any amount of facial massage will not remove.

A bored expression is easily assumed when one plays cards and hard to lay aside afterwards.

By LILLIAN RUSSELL.

(Copyright, 1912, by Lillian Russell.)

NO woman can be an inveterate card player and keep her beauty.

Even a woman who declares that she thoroughly enjoys cards cannot come out of a card game without some sort of racking or embarrassing emotion.

There are many card faces. They all become hard in time. One beautiful woman of my acquaintance became so infatuated with bridge that she never went out of her home unless to the theater in the evening. She played cards one entire summer without taking a walk or a drive in the open. Consequently her face became pale, dark circles framed her pretty eyes, and, although she positively was doing what her brain imagined was her own pleasure, she was declining in health rapidly.

I have seen women who cross the ocean once or twice a year for pleasure sit in the cardroom during the entire voyage, losing all of the stimulation the salt air was waiting to bestow upon them, ending their voyage in no better health than when they started—in fact, with much vitality lost. For the better a woman plays cards the more vitality she wastes.

In New York almost all charitable institutions and clubs have what are called "club euchres," which any woman may attend for the small sum of 50 cents. This money goes to charity and the women play for prizes. These prizes are in the shape of theater tickets, table linen, vases, etc. It is an interesting sight to see from 100 to 200 women playing cards as though their lives depended upon it, just for those little foolish prizes. Of course they do not care who gets their 50 cents. They love to play cards.

There are some of these women who attend four or five of these card games each week and find their only pleasure in them. Their manners lose all politeness, although they wear all their polite clothes and are decked in jewels and fine linen—what you can see of it.

They come in and look over the prizes and generally make sarcastic remarks about them before they start in to try to win them. They think prizes are never good enough for them because they have acquired a card nature.

To watch the faces of some as they are losing is a remarkable study. And the poor woman who only goes there for the fun of passing away a few hours once in a while and does not care whether she wins or loses, one who plays carelessly, so to speak—well, if looks and remarks could murder she would die a few horrible deaths in one afternoon.

I was a miserable victim, of course. I only went to one of those card games. I guiltily admit, just to have the experience and know exactly what I was writing about. I would rather give many times 50 cents to charity than receive the hard looks and hear the rude remarks I was obliged to listen to. I wasn't the only bad player there, either.

Games of cards are enjoyable to pass the time away for an hour or so, but more than an hour is time and brains wasted.

And it is such a devastation to health and beauty. Underlying the features is a series of bones which determine the general configuration of the face and which the individual cannot change.

By running the fingers over the face it can easily be felt where these come to the surface, and it will be found that they make the outlines of the forehead, the circular orbits of the eyes, the prominence of the cheekbones, the bridge of the nose, and the outlines of the jaws.

This bony framework is beyond the power of the individual to change. But one can get control of the muscles which are attached to the bones and bring them under the will. One can get into certain facial habits that will make either for beauty or ugliness.

I wish I could make card playing women realize this.

The muscles determine the expression and may be considered as strings which are pulled in response to thought. Little attention is paid by card playing women to the expression of their faces, and as the result many women who have regular features miss a present or attractive countenance because of the distorting facial habits they acquire while playing cards.

"No woman can be an inveterate card player and keep her beauty," says Lillian Russell.

If I could only make my women readers see that either a faulty expression or a lack of expression is due entirely to themselves I am sure I would have benefited womankind immeasurably.

All the muscles of the body, with the exception of the heart, are under the control of the will, some actively so, some unconsciously so.

If the will acting on a muscle exerts more effort than necessary, the nerve for force overflows to the other muscles, which contract in response. Often card playing women, in their anxiety to win, pent up their feelings, contracting the muscles of the face and the hands, screwing them into the most wrinkle making distortions they could ever resort to even were they striving to secure an effective wrinkle maker.

An inveterate card player adds years to her makeup every afternoon she spends at cards.

Card players should remember that over each muscle of the body the brain exercises a constant control which is relaxed only in profound slumber.

In excessive card playing this muscle tone becomes exaggerated and the woman goes about with a tension that entails a great expenditure of nerve force and is a great drain on the system.

A display of this is more frequently seen in the face than elsewhere and results in an exceedingly unbecoming screwing up of the features. The jaws are set, the forehead is wrinkled, the eyes are squinted, the downward lines are developed around the mouth.

Then there are the unconscious grimaces which the majority of women make over cards without in the least being aware of it. They have little tricks and mannerisms in which they indulge to the complete destruction of pleasing appearance. Sometimes every feature in the face, successively or collectively, becomes a storm center, or it may be only the forehead which is wrinkled into both horizontal and vertical lines. The mouth is screwed up, the lips are pouted, or the underlip is thrust forward in a most distressing manner.

Children sometimes take up these tricks and then drop them, but when grown people have them they are not so easily disposed of. The women who are addicted to cards should remember, too, that their friends will not tell them of their best marking habits. They would not dare tell their best friends that they were wrinkling their brows, or pouting their lips, or remind them of any of their facial peculiarities. It is incumbent upon each woman to discover these facial habits herself and by the process of a little mental training, to overcome them.

of cards is not nearly so important as that you do not put wrinkles in your face.

That no card prize or winning is worth the frowns, the lowering looks, the lips curved downward, which cover teeth that seem like fangs that are ready to crush or tear an offending partner.

That the faults and failings which often lie deep under the veneer of culture readily come to the surface in a game of cards and chip off a bit of the veneer, through this disintegration many unlovely traits are exposed.

That wrinkles are the wage of the inveterate card player and ask yourself if you can afford to pay the price.

Remember: There is much more joy in a good book, even on a rainy day. The book can't fight with you any way you look at it.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

ALICE: Do not, I beg of you, ever use a liquid powder on your face. It is sometimes necessary to use a liquid powder on the neck and arms, especially when wearing a low necked gown. The one I am sending you is harmless, but I do not advise you to use it too often. Once in a while is all right.

GRACE E.: When your hands are sore do not wash them in water, as this will only make them worse. Cleanse them with olive oil or cold cream. Before retiring cover the hands with sweet almond oil and —It is difficult to be a good card player and keep an unwrinkled face.

—An indifferent player often arouses murderous thoughts in her partner's mind.

The mouth is one of the hardest features to manage. It is the one feature of all others which reveals the true inwardness of a person's character. Sometimes the faulty closing of the mouth alters the whole appearance of the face, the setting of the lower jaw giving the appearance of a protruding or a receding chin.

The beauty of the face is due largely to the layer of fat which is spread over the muscles in much the same way as a modeler spreads the clay on the figure he is modeling.

The wear and tear of life, the sorrows, anxieties, and privations alone, not to speak of the useless waste of energy in card playing, play havoc with the fatty interlinings, and when the first bloom of youth departs it either wastes away, leaving the face full of hollows and wrinkles, or it accumulates, adding unsightly rolls to the chin, filling the eye sockets, and making the eyes seem smaller, and deforming the contour of the face.

Now, a few words as how best to overcome the facial ills of card playing. Make up your mind at the start that whether you win or do not win a game put on an old pair of loose fitting kid gloves to protect the bed linen. This oil is healing and in the morning your hands will be smooth and soft. I shall be glad to send you the formula for a nonstaining lotion which is excellent for chapped hands if you will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope.

AUREOLA: From your letter and interesting description of yourself I would infer that you need no advice from me. You seem to realize your own attractiveness. Why not let well enough alone. If the preparations of which you speak agree with your complexion, I see no reason why you should ask advice. I am a great believer in self-reliance. You seem rather young to require much facial treatment; however your letter indicates that your aunt has your interest at heart, why not respect her judgment?

In camp the following day, I was approached by a throng of supplicating natives who implored me to rid the community of a vicious man-eating tiger. They requested, however, that I not hurt him in any way. "Anything to oblige," said I, and immediately arose from my comfortable camp stool, lit a fresh cigar, adjusted my scarf and set out in search of this jungle gentleman.

Without any sort of weapon I searched the jungle far and wide for this brute. At last I came upon him, standing in a clump of reeds. I long had desired to try my magnetic power upon a tiger, so here was the chance. Advancing upon him slowly, keeping my eyes fastened upon him, I saw him bare his teeth, wag his tail nervously and then, with a savage snarl, back slowly away.

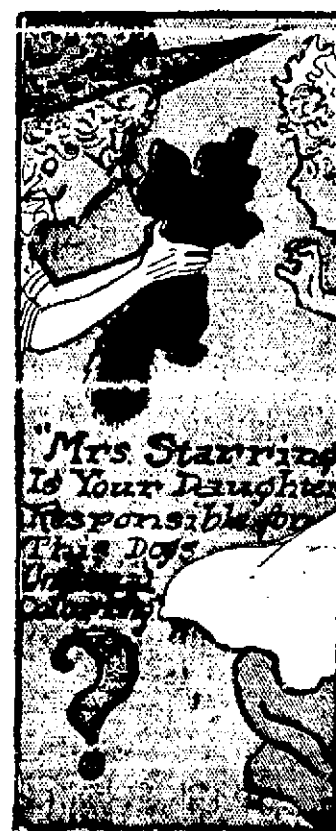

While I pondered on the best means of ensnaring him, he solved the problem for me. He had backed against a gigantic rock and could go no farther. I crept upon him, and then his great chest and fore legs began to recede. His striped skin appeared to be rolling itself around his body. He was, briefly, backing into himself!

Cowering before my magnetic gaze, he backed out of the reeds and, snarling and whining with every step, crouched and slunk back farther and farther. I spoke not a word to him, but crept upon him closer and closer until his hot breath fanned my cheek. Mercilessly I held him with my eye, foiling his every effort to spring aside and make his escape. But I knew I couldn't make him captive, even though he was hypnotized.

In a few moments his head and shoulders and forelegs were completely covered by his loose skin. Taking from my pocket a strong string, I tied it loosely about his body, grasped him by the tail and swung his great body up over my shoulder. Then I headed the rejoicing and cheering band of natives back to the camp. A magnificent rug adorns the Rajah's palace, twenty-four feet long. And the next day I captured a hippopotamus.

Sheffield Sisters Go to Aid of
Overturned

A capsized canoe, its occupants, two young men, floundering helplessly in the cold waters of Lake Merritt, and their final rescue by two athletic young women, furnished an exciting few minutes to crowds who gathered on the shores of the lake yesterday afternoon.

The accident to the canoeists, who were Harry Lelmer, teller in the Wickham Savings office, and Leo V. Belden, clerk of the Oakland Bank of Savings, occurred shortly after 10 o'clock, the maidens coming to the men in distress being the Misses Lyba and Nita Sheffield, University of California students, crack amateur swimmers and all-around athletes.

Lelmer and Belden embarked for a paddle about the lake early in the afternoon, using the canoe belonging to John Degman, another employee of the Oakland Bank of Savings. Shortly after putting out from shore and while the fragile craft was skimming over deep water, the boat was overturned in some manner and both canoeists plunged unceremoniously into the water. The canoe turned completely over and although the two men succeeded in holding on, they failed to right it.

GIRLS TO RESCUE.
It was then their distress was seen by the Misses Sheffield, who were out for a row. A short pull brought them to the floundering men and a skillful manipulation of their craft, born of long experience as oarswomen, soon rescued the submerged paddlers. Eleven minutes in the cold waters of the lake, Belden and Lelmer escaped any physical injuries.

At no time were the canoeists in great danger, for their rescuers are famed for their prowess in the water. They were sophomore in the university, having come there from Los Angeles. Within the past year they have won across the Golden Gate and have at other times made records in the water. Both are accomplished and all-around athletes.

President Urges Uniformity of Law "Necessary to Justice"

Declares He Is Real Progressive and Points to Legislative Acts

CHICAGO, March 9.—In an address before the Swedish-American Republican League of Illinois, President Taft assailed the new doctrines advanced by Theodore Roosevelt as "the beginnings and manifestations of a despotism." The President was the chief speaker at the annual banquet of the league at the Congress hotel.

"Such a government," said President Taft, in discussing the recall of judicial decisions as advocated by Colonel Roosevelt in his Columbus speech, "would lack in uniformity of law which is essential to justice and would produce that confusion and those exceptions in the application of law which are the beginning and manifestations of a despotism."

President Taft drew a sharp distinction between those he considers real progressives and "progressive extremists."

The President avowed himself to be a real progressive and pointed to legislation enacted during his administration as proof that he was.

President Taft defined the term progressive as including "all" who have been moved to efforts of reform by the necessity for legislative and governmental action to deprive corporate capital and undue vested privileges of its political power and to bring about proper popular and governmental control and regulation of the use of capital in legitimate avenues and for legitimate purposes.

EXTREMISTS SHORT-LIVED.
Paying his respects to progressive extremists, President Taft admitted that these persons are able to attain for a time at least a great popular support. The extremists, he said, wrongfully endeavor to give the impression that others equally imbued with the necessity for reform but whose methods do not complete the destruction of the present government or the placing in jeopardy of life, liberty and property are reactionary and unprogressive with the cause of the people.

The President asserted his belief in popular government. He made it clear, however, that he believes more checks and safeguards should be provided than are proposed in the popular movement advocated by extremists.

"The man who tells the people of danger that may arise from mistaken and hasty action," said the President, "pays a higher tribute to them than one who constantly fawns upon them as if they were incapable of errors."

PROGRESS IN ADMINISTRATION.
President Taft said that he is able to point to many realizations of progress in his own administration. He said progress was shown in his success in avoiding unnecessary disturbance of business, in regulating the

BY JOHN L. EDDY.
NEW YORK, March 9.—The Countess of Warwick, sharer of one of the proudest titles in Great Britain, mistress of historic old Warwick Castle, the one-time stronghold of England's famous "Kingmaker," came over to America today to teach us—to teach us—what? Morals? Manners? Monarchism? How to behave in the presence of a king? No. Democracy—Socialism, if you please.

For Lady Warwick is a Socialist—spelled in capital letters—and she doesn't hesitate to say so.

Like all incoming aliens, her ladyship, before she was permitted to land, had to make a formal declaration of her intentions and her attitude on various subjects.

"Are you an anarchist?" was one of the questions on the printed form submitted to her.

"Not yet," she wrote.

ACCEPTS SOCIALISTIC THEORIES.
"Are you really a Socialist?" I asked as we were waiting for her to get on the bay, after the rough and most all-around disagreeable trip the "Mau" retainer had ever made.

"Do you accept the theories, say of Herr Bebel of Germany?" she asked.

"Of Carl Marx?" she asked. "Yes."

"Would you, if you had the power by the signature of a pen or the wave of a magic wand, do away with the present system and establish immediately absolute communism in its place?"

ANXIOUS FOR COMMUNISM.
"Certainly," she replied, without a moment's hesitation. "There will be no peace until we get it."

Lady Warwick looked every inch an English "great lady" as she held her little court in the lounge of the beleaguered Mauretania.

Among those who paid their respects was the Hon. Mrs. F. Gust, as she appeared on the passenger list, formerly Phipps of Pittsburg, as fine, handsome, healthy, charming and thoroughly English as only the American millionaires wife of a British aristocrat.

Mrs. Gust shifted the subject to SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—Madame Louise Tetrazzini, who boasts San Francisco as her home town, spent tonight in slumming. The region of the bright lights on Pacific street, the region of the great and white way, the dance of the Texas Tommy, the turkey trot and the grizzly bear all turn for some attention. Chinatown was not forgotten and a visit was paid to the new hall of justice, where the diva thanked for his detective escort, inspected the new prison and bestowed her gracious personality upon the tired attendants.

Madame Tetrazzini enjoyed every minute of the tour through the famous section of the city. She was accompanied by her husband, her manager, W. H. Leahy, Mrs. Leahy and two detectives.

'T'WILL BE THRILLING, REALLY, DONCHERKNOW
IF MAIDS DON GARB OF MEN TO PLAY POLO

MISS JENNIE CROCKER, who will ride in the polo races at the Country Club, Coronado, tomorrow. She will probably don masculine riding togs for the race, in which her contenders will be Miss Eleanor Sears, Mrs. John Borden, Miss Reid, Miss Georgiana Leadbetter, Lady Reginald Herbert.

Eleanor Sears, Jennie Crocker and Other Society Girls Say They're Going to Enter Races Today Thus Attired

CORONADO, Cal., March 9.—Will they or won't they? Is the all-absorbing question over the teacups and brandy-and-sodas of the local fashionable and devotees of sports here today.

"They" refers to Miss Jennie Crocker, Miss Eleanor Sears, Lady Reginald Herbert and a number of other fashionable who are due to ride in the polo pony races tomorrow, and the question is whether or not they will appear in regulation men's bifurcated polo clothes, otherwise trousers, or not.

Gossip in Country Club circles has it that Miss Sears, who has so far been strangely conventional since her recent arrival in California, has definitely decided to give local society its long-awaited thrill. That thrill, it is generally understood, will take the form of the most approved tailored men's clothes, trousers, puttees and snugly fitting coat, together with the colors of the horse's owner prominently displayed. Such an action is not altogether to be unexpected from the dashing Back Bay maiden, but that the other fair riders have also secretly announced their intention of doing likewise is what has made society sit up and gasp.

It is whispered about that bets are even on the promised appearance of the riders, all of whom are now equestrian and believed to be fond enough of the sport and of winning the race not to let any mere matter of unbecoming skirts serve as a handicap in riding.

The riders will make their appearance in the sixth and seventh races which will be run late in the afternoon. In the first race will appear Miss Sears, Mrs. C. W. Clark, Mrs. Walter Dupee, Mrs. Duval and Mrs. H. Velle. The next will see mounted Miss Crocker, a favorite in San Francisco social circles; Miss Sears once more, Lady Reginald Herbert, whose husband is a member of the English team which appeared so successfully recently at Burlingame; Miss Georgiana Leadbetter, Miss Reid and Mrs. John Borden.

Enough of the sport and of winning the race not to let any mere matter of unbecoming skirts serve as a handicap in riding.

Daring Robber Securely Binds
McNab Employee; Flees
With $2600

Highwayman Climbs Into the
to Do Bidding

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—With amazing daring which rivals the speed of the taxicab robbery of New York city, a chauffeur formerly employed by James McNab, a wealthy drayman of this city, held up the paymaster and timekeeper of McNab & Smith at the point of a revolver, bound them with wires in a lonely stable and escaped with $2600. The boldness with which the robbery was committed can best be realized when it is known that the highwayman was acquainted with his victims and saluted them brazenly on the public street, climbed into an open buggy with them and forced them to drive him through the street at the point of a loaded revolver.

ROBBER ESCAPES.
Nothing like this robbery has occurred in San Francisco since the days of the vigilantes, and yet the man was successful in his planning, and up to this time has not been caught. The police arrested a former companion, who bears a startling resemblance to him.

The actual robbery occurred in an abandoned stable near Tenth and Brannan streets, where the bandit had carefully prepared for the reception of his victims.

The culprit is George Houghton, and, knowing his name and having a minute description of him, the 25 detectives and policemen who are working on the case have every hope of soon landing him behind the bars.

$2600 IN BAG.
It was almost 6 o'clock tonight when Harry Levy, cashier of the McNab & Smith Draying Company, the largest concern of its kind on the Pacific Coast, left the office at 38 Davis street, accompanied by Martin Armstrong, a trip every Saturday afternoon, carrying $2600 to be used in paying off the teamsters, hostlers and stablemen at the barn on Bryant street, between Seventh and Eighth. They had made the trip every Saturday afternoon at about the same hour for years, and there was no secret about the fact that they carried the money with them. They drove to Market street, the market to Seventh and down to Polson street. When they were crossing the car tracks George Houghton, who up to a month ago was employed as a chauffeur by James McNab, president of the firm, ran forward and halted them. Knowing him and suspecting nothing, they stopped.

"Give this to Mr. McNab for me," he said, as he handed Levy a wallet. The cashier thought nothing about it, but took the leather pocketbook and went about to drive on when he was surprised to see Houghton jump into the small box section at the rear of the light vehicle.

GIVES HIS ORDERS.
"Drive me to Tenth and Brannan streets," he ordered.

"Well, I guess not," retorted Levy. "We are going to the barn."

"Oh, I guess you will," whispered the other coolly, as he drew a revolver and displayed it menacingly. Then to emphasize its presence, he placed it against Levy's neck.

"I have never seen you before," said Levy, "but when he had them tied up to suit him, he closed the door and

CONFERENCE WILL SETTLE QUESTION OF STRIKE

The Reply of Anthracite Coal Operators to Be Made on Wednesday.

Price of Coal Will Be Increased Whatever Conference May Determine.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The reply of the anthracite operators to the demands of the miners for shorter hours, more wages and better working conditions will be made on Wednesday next when the committee representing both parties will re-assemble in the Lehigh Valley railroad office in this city to continue the conference which was adjourned on February 27 the day the demands were submitted.

Just what concessions the operators will make cannot be ascertained at this time but it is admitted they will be very few. Many of the demands will be unconditionally refused. One in particular is the paragraph that provides for a method by which the coal companies would be obliged to collect the dues for the miners organization by deducting a certain amount from the pay envelopes of the workers. The operators look upon this proposition as a method by which the union would automatically enlist the aid of the operators against themselves in other words the operators would be collecting a fund which was to be used principally to finance strikes.

Other important questions are the 20 per cent increase in wages and 8-hour working day recognition of the union and the changing of scale by which payment for mined coal would be made on a weight basis instead of by the carload.

WANT ONE YEAR AGREEMENT

Should the committee representing miners and operators reach a definite agreement a new peace pact between the operators of labor in the anthracite coal world will be formed. The miners' representatives however will fight for a one-year agreement instead of three years for which period of time the present contract is in force and which expires April 1. The miners claim that a three-year contract doesn't enable them to keep abreast of rapidly changing conditions of living.

This contract was originally signed nine years ago as a result of the work of the Roosevelt Mine Strike Commission in its efforts to bring about a peaceful termination of the big coal strike of 1902, which lasted for eight months. The contract called for a ten per cent increase in the wage scale existing at that time, and reduced the ten-hour day to nine hours.

This contract was renewed in 1908 and 1909, and the miners contend that it was about time some recognition was given their effort to preserve a continuance of peaceful relations between the coal companies and themselves.

POSSIBILITY OF STRIKE

If no agreement is reached as a result of the conference which reconvenes Wednesday a general order will be sent out to the 180,000 workers in the anthracite regions to quit work on March 11 until further notice. This would not only mean the loss of millions of dollars a month in wages to the sections affected, but would also cause thousands of railroad men who are employed in the freightage of coal to be thrown out of work.

Whatever action is taken, whether the miners are granted an increase in wages or their demands are rejected and a strike is declared, the price of coal will be boosted. This is certain. Before the first meeting of the conference was held two weeks ago, one of the operators was quoted as saying: "If there is any increase in the price of mining coal the public will pay for it. An advance in wages will be at once followed by an advance in the price of coal, because most of the companies are now making but a very small percentage of profit."

The demands of the miners were presented to the operators as the result of a resolution passed at the national convention of United Mine Workers at Indianapolis during the latter part of January. Upon receipt of the demands from National President John P. White,

A MODEL SCHOOL IS OPENED IN CITY OF NEWARK

Manual Training to Be Taught in Entirely New Method in New Jersey.

Five-room Flat, to Teach Art of Housekeeping for Benefit of the Girls.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—A five-room model flat and a machine shop and a school of business are some of the features incorporated in a public high school just opened in Newark, N. J. for the purpose of preparing girls and boys to be good wives, good workmen and good clerks.

The model flat containing dining room, parlor, bedroom and bathroom in addition to the school kitchen provides practical problems in housekeeping for the girls who also receive instruction in other branches of housework, such as sewing, millinery, home sanitation, nursing, cooking and the subjects. The machine shop, one hundred feet long is maintained in connection with the course in manual training. In addition to machine-shop work the manual training course also gives the high school boys the chance to learn to work with their hands. Preparation for such occupations as joinery, wood turning and free hand and machine drawing is also provided.

As the school generates its own light and power, it is likewise enabled to give instruction in the handicrafts which pertain to these branches. In order to use this plant for instruction purposes, a special test room has been provided.

In the business school courses in business practice and typewriting are offered. All these courses in housekeeping, handicrafts and commerce are in addition to the regular English high school work.

MODEL PLANT.

The school plant provided for this work embodies a number of features which the experts of the United States Bureau of Education are observing with attention. The general plan of the building, whose eighty rooms will accommodate 1200 children, is a hollow square. On the first floor level there is a large auditorium, extending through the second story, with an arcade on each side which permits the second story corridors to serve as galleries in case of an overflow. The auditorium is lighted from above by an open court.

The roof covered with flat tiles has been adapted for use as an exercise ground. There is also a complete gymnasium, 80 feet square. Teachers' rooms, as well as rest rooms for the accommodation of all, have been provided. A room specially fitted for the teaching of music is located between the two lunch rooms, thus isolating it from all the other classrooms in the building while at the same time allowing the privileges of music during the lunch hour.

The building, four stories high, rises to a height of nearly 100 feet above street level. It is designed throughout all the other classrooms in the building, which are of the Collegiate Gothic style executed in brick with terra-cotta trimmings, was adopted for the exterior. The interior of the auditorium is Elizabethan.

The erection of this building, just opened under the name of Central Commercial and Manual Training High School, marks the latest step in a progressive building campaign, begun by Newark four years ago, and under which nineteen school buildings have been put up in the last four years. These nineteen buildings have cost $2,700,000 of which $500,000 has been spent for the new Central Commercial and Manual Training High School alone. This high school, together with another opened a year ago, has considerably more than doubled the high school accommodations of Newark within a twelve-month.

George F. Baer, President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, asked that the conference be adjourned until March 13, in order to allow the operators sufficient time in which to give the demands their careful consideration and come to some definite agreement as to what attitude they would adopt in answering the miners.

MRS. ALLAN STORY SEEN IN ACTOR'S ROOM BATHING SUITS DIVORCE CASE FEATURE

MRS. ALLAN STORY, who figures as defendant in a sensational New York divorce case.

Witnesses Describe Pranks of Girl-Wife at the Cottage They Had Rented at Beach

NEW YORK, March 9.—A sensational divorce is now pending in New York through the allegations which Allan Story has made against his girl-wife, claiming her intimacy with an actor named Stanley Forde, in which a number of the actor's shirts will play an important part.

In outlining his client's case, Story's attorney said Story had been away from home on account of poor health, and returning unexpectedly, dropped in on Forde at his bachelor apartments on West Thirty-second street and found Mrs. Story there with Forde's sister. It is further stated by the attorney that as many as eleven of Forde's shirts were sent away from the Story apartment in one bundle, and, further, that Mrs. Story had left word that she would see no one when Forde paid her visits.

LIVE IN COTTAGE.

A cottage rented by Mrs. Story and occupied by herself, Forde and his sister at Navesink Beach for the summer has been the scene for much of the evidence set forth in the case when called for trial. Stanley Forde, who has been named as co-respondent, arrived at the court close at the heels of Justice Goff.

The room was packed and he had to turn completely about, betraying his bald spot to all quarters before finding accommodation away back for his portly person. The defendant did not notice him. Her pallid face set off her black eyes strikingly. Allan

Story seemed moody and rarely smiled at comic interludes that caused Actor Forde to quake in silent enjoyment.

How the comedian and Story's girl-wife passed their time in constant companionship when they occupied a cottage at Navesink Beach was recounted by Neighbor Samuel Levine, who in town is a real estate man with an office at 85 Nassau street.

"How often did you see them in bathing together?" inquired Lawyer Mooney for the suing husband.

OFTEN IN BATHING.

"Whenever the weather permitted," answered the witness decisively. Actor Forde, in the rear of the room, indulged in an unconscious smile. It appeared that the Levine occupied the next cottage to Mrs. Story's and that the real estate man directed a more or less rigorous scrutiny toward the couple next door. He swore that besides bathing together, Forde and his neighbor's wife went to market together, gathered poses in company, did chores in unison, the actor's clothes safeguarded by an apron, and, in fact, that every time the man took a step he was followed by the girl.

"Tell us about the actions of Mrs. Story and Mrs. Forde in and about the premises," requested Mooney after the witness had shown a photograph of a pretty cottage which was established as the one Mrs. Story had hired against her husband's wishes.

"I saw everything from our house, saw them go in bathing every day. There was one room in particular where they changed their bathing suits."

"Point that out in the picture."

"There, sir. That room."

"That else did you see?"

"Well, they were in the habit of removing their bathing suits in that room."

"How was that?"

"Well, after the bath it was usually the custom—I noticed on numerous occasions—Mr. Forde handed out his bathing suit to Mrs. Story on the balcony."

"What else?"

"I noticed sometimes that Mrs. Story opened the door and looked in. Then, when Mr. Forde was dressed, Mrs. Story went in and handed out her bathing suit. I couldn't hear anything they said."

DISAPPEARED IN WOODS.

Frequently, Mrs. Story and the actor rowed across the Shrewsbury river and disappeared in the high, wooded land on the farther side, Levine said, and after some two hours they would reappear with the basket they had taken filled with ferns and wild flowers.

The witness did not appear to take so much interest in the other neighbors. He hadn't any definite idea as to how the Spencers, who occupied the red cottage, waited away the time. As for the Coles, mother and daughter, he had an inkling of their occupation.

Justice Goff said he needn't tell, but finally he admitted that he thought they were detectives hired to spy on Mrs. Story and her friend.

Otto Cohn, Levine's brother-in-law, who also summered at Navesink Beach, next took the stand.

"I arrived on the same train as Mr. Story," said Cohn. "Mrs. Story and I came down to meet him."

"How did they greet him?"

"Mr. Forde took Mr. Story's bag. Mrs. Story didn't greet him at all."

"How long did Mr. Story stay?"

"I saw him there the next day playing with a tennis ball and sitting in the sand with the baby."

"Mr. Cohn also said there were benches along the beach."

"One night walking up from the village I saw them sitting on that bench. Forde had his arm around her on the back of the bench."

"Did you see any movement of the arm?" inquired Mr. Mooney.

HOUSE PASSES PENSION MEASURE

Filibuster Comes to an End When Roddenberry Plays Trump Card.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The filibuster conducted in the House against another omnibus pension bill by Representative Roddenberry of Georgia came to an end today when the House passed the bill by a vote of 214 to 95. After filibustering all yesterday Roddenberry played his last card today by making a point of no quorum. After this was assembled the bill was rushed through.

Representative Martin of Colorado demanded an immediate investigation of the smelter trust. On learning the judicial committee would take action Tuesday on his resolution to investigate Martin withdrew his motion to discharge the committee from its consideration.

The remainder of the day in the House was spent in listless debate on the agricultural bill which has been under consideration for nearly two weeks.

The committee on labor reported on the Taylor system of shop management which it recently investigated.

mittee found it is not perfect enough to be used in any government machine shop.

The committee investigating the Major Ray case continued its hearings. Major-General Carter was unable to throw any light upon the missing papers in the case showing the reason for Ray's various strange transfers alleged to have been obtained through "political pull."

PENSION MEASURES.

The entire session of the Georgia legislature was spent in considering individual pension measures. Senator Smith of Georgia was joined in his fight against extravagance in pension legislation by Senator Bryan of Florida.

A concurrent resolution offered by Senator Oliver was passed authorizing the Major-General Carter was unable to throw any light upon the missing papers in the case showing the reason for Ray's various strange transfers alleged to have been obtained through "political pull."

The Senate committee on the judiciary continued hearings on the Webb pension bill. Senator Percy announced he would not reply on the floor of the Senate to the resolution of the Mississippi legislature demanding his resignation. Instead he will reply directly to the Mississippi legislature.

TEAM OF EXPERTS REPORT PLAN FOR AIDING THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT Suggestions for Carrying On the Work Already Begun in the Cities of Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda Along Practical Lines

Team Three of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, consisting of Clarence A. Barbour, William A. Brown, David Russell, John L. Alexander, John M. Dean, Raymond Robin, John M. Moore, Robert M. Moore, at the meeting yesterday afternoon submitted the following suggested program of work and services for Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda:

- SOCIAL SERVICE.
1. A Social Survey and combined City Plan and Social Service Program for Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda.
  2. Adequate inspection and enforcement of housing and sanitary codes.
  3. Better food inspection.

  25. Plan visitation parties from local churches to the various municipal and private social service agencies, thus insuring an intelligent public interest and sense of public responsibility and aid in providing volunteer workers for social service undertakings.
- A MISSIONARY POLICY.
- IN GENERAL.
- Fully two-thirds of the members of the churches are yet to be enlisted as intelligent, systematic supporters of the missionary enterprise.
- To reach these, a comprehensive continuous program of missionary education and training is required of which the following are the essential points:
1. A representative missionary committee in every church.
  2. United systematic missionary education.
  3. Weekly missionary offerings through the church treasury.
  4. A systematic and complete canvass of every member of the church and congregation.
  5. A program of prayer for missions.
  6. Participation in local missionary activity, with continued effort for the recruiting of men for the ministry, and for missionary service at home and abroad.
- IN PARTICULAR.
- As an effective form of missionary education for the church, we recommend that there be at least twice a year an eight weeks' campaign of education in the study of a particular field or phase of home or foreign missionary work. This should include:
- (a) A Mission Study Class of from six to ten men who shall meet weekly for eight weeks.
  - (b) A Reading Circle composed of the largest number of men and women who agree to read the book at home.
  - (c) Three or four church prayer-meetings or church services to be turned over to the study of the campaign during the progress of the campaign.

- EVANGELISM.
- I. Training classes for personal evangelism. Teaching men: (a) To Preach. (b) To Live the Christ Life. (c) To Know Him. (d) To Handle the World.
  - II. A simultaneous campaign for Personal Evangelism.
  - III. Co-operation with Community Extension and Auxiliary Towns' Committee. Organizing Evangelistic Bands for Delegation Work.
  - IV. A Special Evangelistic Campaign for Men and Boys in Each Local Church at an early date.
  - V. Occasional Evangelistic Institutes. (a) Regular Meetings for Prayer. (b) The Lord's Supper on the day by those that were being saved. Acts 2:42.
- COMMUNITY EXTENSION TARGET.
- "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that followed."—Mark 16:20.
- I. A permanent and representative Inter-Church Committee on Community Extension.
- II. A minimum of 20 extension points with leader, speaker, music, helpers and inside committee for each point.
- III. A weekly meeting of Community Extension Staff for reports, detail and training. This is the great place of thought, action, energy and thoughtful consideration of details to do extensive work.
- IV. Expose as many laymen as possible. See Sanbury Chart in back of Community Extension Manual. Plan visitation parties from local churches to the various municipal and private social service agencies, thus insuring an intelligent public interest and sense of public responsibility and aid in providing volunteer workers for social service undertakings.
- A REASONABLE PROGRAM FOR INTER-CHURCH WORK WITH BOYS BETWEEN 12 AND 20 YEARS.
- I. Form an Inter-Church Council of Men and Boys from each church, to study and promote the four-fold activities of boyhood.
- II. Continually keep the boys before the boy's eye as the best place for a boy's growth, by helping all church organizations for boys.
- III. Campaign the local churches on the responsibility of Christian men and older boys for leadership of boys.
- IV. A Leader's Training Class—Men and Older Boys. Principles of Psychology, Religious Psychology, Principles and Methods of Boys' Work, etc. See Bible Study Recommendation on Leaders' Group Normal Institute, Graded Union or Special Training Class.
- V. Annual Conference of Older Boys.
- VI. Hold annual meetings where older boys are given an opportunity to take a Forward Step and express their religious life.
- VII. A systematic campaign for sex instruction.
- (1) Fathers' Meeting.
- (2) Mothers' Meeting.
- (3) Teachers.
- VIII. Organize Christian Athletics on an Inter-Church Basis. Boys' Camp supervised.
- IX. Urge adequate play space, social centers and paid supervision all the year round for adolescent boys.
- X. Agitate for industrial and vocational training in the public schools.
- XI. Plan for the betterment of the working boy by investigation, and set up "Get-Ther" Clubs, etc.

'HISTORY REPEATS; CLARK TO GO IN' TO CONTEST WITH COWBOYS OF U. S.

Missouri Senator Says That It Is Cinch for Speaker of the House.

CHICAGO, March 9.—"History repeats itself and the history of Abraham Lincoln from the occupation of rail-splitter to the proud position of President of the United States will be repeated in Champ Clark," said Senator William J. Stone, the senior Senator from Missouri, tonight. He was addressing 200 enthusiastic supporters of the speaker at a Champ Clark reception held under the auspices of the Missouri Society of Chicago. W. K. Patton presided.

"Washington was first and his memory will be first in the hearts of the people of this country," went on Senator Stone. "Lincoln holds second place by the vote of his countrymen and women, but Champ Clark is third. Today as speaker of the House he holds a place second only in importance to that of the President and he will hold that place, too, after next November."

"Did you ever split rails?" asked the Senator, holding out his hands. "I have and I know what Lincoln faced as a rail-splitter. Lincoln came from a hillside farm of Kentucky and so did Champ Clark. Lincoln was a rail-splitter and so was Clark. The man who is to carry the Democratic banner to victory next fall came from the poorest section of Kentucky. But Clark went to Missouri as a boy and he will go to the President's chair as a citizen of the State which I now feel is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in the Union."

GLACIER REVEALS TRAGEDY IN SNOW

Timber Cruiser Finds Bodies of Deer Slain in Fight Long Past.

BELLEVILLE, March 9.—Mute evidence of a mortal combat that may have occurred years before the first white man ever set foot on western American shores, was revealed to J. K. Magnusson, a timber cruiser on the slopes of Mount Baker, a few days ago. Lying in the lower edge of Roosevelt Glacier were the crumbling bones of a buck deer of more than ordinary size. Digging down into the ice the cruiser uncovered the remains of a second animal, the body in an excellent state of preservation. The entire of the animal was light-colored, showing that the deer had died in little.

From the position of the skeleton and the body in the glacier, Magnusson is of the opinion that the deer had been carried a long distance from the mountain side, as the glacier flows only four or five inches a day, the battle of the bones may have occurred centuries ago.

7 DAYS' GRACE GIVEN MEXICO

Official Says the United States Has Made Threat to Intervene.

MEXICO CITY, March 9.—"Seven days have been given Mexico to restore peace, at the end of which time the United States will intervene if chaotic conditions then prevail."

This statement was made today by the minister of the interior in answering a deputation of railroad men who offered their services in preparing the city for an attack. The remark, however, is regarded merely as a threat by the government to frighten the rebels into submission.

President Madero refused an offer of General Zapata, who asked for an amnesty through a personal emissary and promised to lay down his arms. He said that Zapata's overtures were the result of the federal process and sent him this message:

"Tell him I will pardon him and that he must answer for all his crimes."

Foreigners are still leaving the city and those who remain are keeping off the streets.

Will Could Have Mate In $1,000,000 Castle

Howard to Furnish Magnificent House; Rumors of Wedding.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Another fillip has been given to the rumor that Howard Gould is to wed a second time by the announcement, on his return from abroad today, that his sole purpose in crossing the water was to complete the furnishing of Castle Gould, his magnificent estate near Port Washington, L. I., which was built at an outlay of more than $1,000,000.

It is said that his return from abroad was made on the advice of a young woman who is to be the future mistress of the estate.

The identity of the young woman is a mystery at present, but the rumor flows from club to club with his arrival that her name would soon be made public and that the millionaire had already completed arrangements with his former wife, who was Katherine Clemons, to seek a Reno divorce and leave him free to marry.

The amount of the inducement tendered to his ex-wife is estimated all the way from $50,000 a year to $100,000.

The former Mrs. Gould now receives alimony to the extent of $38,000, which was awarded her after a sensational divorce trial in New York.

PROPOSAL CONTEST MAY BE ALL IN EARNEST

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—Scores of marriages are likely to result from a unique leap year proposal contest recently started for amusement by the Glendale club of Masons.

The lodge, in a spirit of fun, offered a prize for the best proposal written by a man or a woman, and more than a hundred competitors were quickly heard from. They wrote in such a convincing vein that it was decided to turn their proposals over without the names to an equal number of eligible young men in the lodge and let them trace them if possible.

It develops that many have succeeded, and that a majority of the women were very much in earnest. Many showed remarkable talent at popping the question to an unknown. None expected to win a man for a prize, but assurance is given that many will.

WILL ENTERTAIN FOR INSTITUTE OFFICERS

MARTINEZ, March 9.—St. Catherine's Council, Young Men's Institute, will entertain a number of the grand officers of the order on Wednesday night, March 20. They will include Grand President Denehey, Grand Secretary Stanley and several other prominent officers. A committee from the local council, consisting of George Whiteman, chairman; County Recorder M. H. Hurley, Mayor J. J. McNamara, James H. Hoy, Fred Kelly and John P. Galvin has been appointed to arrange details of the visitation. An initiation and smoker will be features of the evening.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS TO CONSIDER STREETS

MARTINEZ, March 9.—The board of trade has been requested by Division Superintendent Whitney of the Southern Pacific railroad to call a conference between the board and representatives of the railroad in the near future to consider the opening of Las Juntas, Mills, Clark and other streets across the railway tracks to the waterfront.

No date has been set for the conference.

MARTINEZ WANTS TO EXTEND ITS WHARF

MARTINEZ, March 9.—Plans for the municipal wharf and tidal canal have been prepared and sent to the War Department in Washington for approval. The final work on their completion was done by representatives of the Martinez Mill Company, Oakland harbor experts, and Mayor McNamara. The wharf will be called for as soon as the desired permission to extend the wharf beyond the present pierhead line is secured.

MAGNIFICENT H. C. CAPWELL CO. BUILDING IS MODEL STRUCTURE NOT EVEN SECOND IN APPOINTMENTS TO WHITELEY STORE

Magnificent new building of the H. C. Capwell Company at Fourteenth and Clay streets. This building contains all the latest features for the attraction of trade and the accommodation and comfort of customers.

Civic Pride of Prominent Local Merchants Leads Them to Combine Latest and Best in Arrangements of Monster Building in This City

A big department store opened by the Lord Mayor wearing his ermine robe of office, his heavy gold chain that reaches almost to his knees, and preceded and followed by standard-bearers and fellow officials in gorgeous costumes—that's the way the new Whiteley store was recently opened in London, as told in recent advices from Britain's capital.

What would the outside world think of Oakland if such official recognition were given to private enterprise? Yet—on second thought, there appears to be nothing out of place in such a practice. It has not become the custom in America yet, although no country in the world more fully recognizes the fact that any important addition to a city's assets is the direct concern of every citizen.

MAGNIFICENT BUILDING.

This spirit of civic pride is certainly one of the foundation stones of the magnificent Capwell company building as of that of Whiteley, "the Universal Provider," in London. From the first minute that the idea of the Capwell building was born in the minds of these two constructionists, H. C. Capwell and A. S. Lavenson, it was their determination to give to Oakland something of which every citizen should be proud.

How well the firm has carried out and elaborated upon its original decision will only be fully known and appreciated when the tens of thousands of people throng the beautiful building on the occasion of its formal opening.

Of special interest to Oaklanders is the fact that there is hardly a single feature of the big London store that will not be found duplicated in the Capwell building.

The comparison between the two stores is not only interesting, but it has also a touch of instruction in it as showing some of those "English ways" that books and magazines tell of.

PLAYGROUND FOR CHILDREN.

In the London house there is "a playground, with everything to amuse children, reading rooms, rest room, place to write letters, numerous telephones, quick parcel conveyances from one department to another, chutes, an Italian garden and a tea room."

In the Capwell house there are all these things, and many more, and, judging by the details, the "Oakland establishment has Whiteley's largely-exploited efforts left a long way behind in the race for exquisite finish and thought."

The Capwell roof garden is easily seen to be a great advance on that of the London man. The news says: "One feature of the new (Whiteley) building which is likely to prove a great attraction during the summer months is the Italian garden, which will be laid out on the roof. Here will be flowers blooming in profusion on all sides. High above the surrounding roofs visitors will be able to partake of refreshments in surroundings that can be equaled by few in the metropolis."

THE ROOF GARDEN.

The Capwell roof garden will be a great attraction all the year round. There will be flowers blooming all over the roof on Christmas day; and throughout the entire year thousands will daily enjoy the promenade and the magnificent views of city, sea, valley, hill and sky—things of which the London public can have but a hazy conception.

One of the Whiteley "features" is thus described: "For the men an old English lounge will be provided, where the conveniences found in an ordinary club will be present."

In the Capwell roof garden there is a special place for men where they can lounge and smoke and read and converse and be served with light refreshments under conditions that are never possible in the smoky atmosphere of England's capital. This desirable feature for men was given a great deal of thought and care, and it will doubtless prove one of the most popular places in the big store, especially around the noon siesta time.

Another feature of comparison between the London and the Oakland store is thus described: "One of the most interesting points about the new Whiteley store is the enormous number of sprinklers in the roof, which, on the heat of a fire causing the wax stoppers to melt, will shower on the goods."

Here, again, is the Capwell fire-proof system to the fore. On every ceiling, over every stairway, in the basement and over every section of the roof garden are hundreds of sprinklers, but they do not depend on the melting of wax stoppers. The Capwell sprinklers depend on the most modern, metallic composition, which, when the temperature reaches the very moderate heat of 150 degrees, liberates the valve and starts the automatic fire-service in full blast.

TRAVELING STAIRWAY.

In describing the Whiteley store, no mention is made of that great modern convenience, the escalator, so, evidently, London has not yet reached the level of Oakland in absolute up-to-dateness. In the Capwell store, the escalator cannot fall to be immensely popular. It runs from the main floor to the second floor, and is in the nature of an endless, traveling stairway. The visitor simply steps onto one of the escalator steps and, while standing still, and without any effort, is quickly and easily landed on the upper floor. This clever device can conveniently carry one thousand people an hour and will greatly relieve the elevator service during rush hours such as are common on "bargain days."

Here's another timely hint from the proceedings at the Whiteley opening: "At the exercises inside the building the Lord Mayor urged English people to be patriotic and to buy their goods at such places as Whiteley's, where everything they wanted could be obtained, instead of going elsewhere."

Every Oaklander can easily apply the moral of the British Lord Mayor's remarks, for in the principle of home trading, in England as well as in Oakland, lies to a great extent the permanent success of every store in Oakland and, indeed, of the entire city.

OIL PRODUCERS RAISE THE PRICE

Agency Buys Product in Storage; to Make Big Deliveries.

BAKERSFIELD, March 9.—The price of oil was raised 35 cents for all members of the Independent Oil Producers' Agency today when that organization voted to accept the Union Oil Company's proposal to purchase all of the corporation's oil in storage, guaranteeing that figure as a minimum. Deliveries to the amount of 200,000 barrels a month will be made. The agency has approximately 1,000,000 barrels in storage. There was but one dissenting vote.

Negotiable certificates, redeemable at a minimum of 65 cents per barrel, will be issued. Bidding will be made on oil in storage March 31, 1912.

The oil men were in mass meeting with State mineralogist W. H. Storms this afternoon discussing the problem of water filtration in the oil producing sands.

WANT MOUNT SHASTA NATIONAL RESERVATION

YREKA, March 9.—The following resolution, advocating the setting aside of Mt. Shasta as a national park, was passed by the Shasta county board of supervisors:

"Be it resolved, That this board does hereby unqualifiedly and earnestly endorse the proposal to have Mt. Shasta declared to be and accepted by the government of the United States as a national park, and that such action be taken at the earliest possible time, to the end that complete jurisdiction be assumed and proper arrangements made to have it featured as one of the great natural wonders of the world prior to the opening of the Pacific-Panama exposition."

"Be it further resolved, that a properly certified copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. John E. Raker, our congressional representative."

SAN DIEGO TORN BY PLAYFUL WIND

Vessels Safe in Land-locked Harbor, But Those Outside May Have Been Lost.

SAN DIEGO, March 9.—With a gale blowing from the southeast at the rate of forty miles an hour and the barometer at the lowest point ever had in this section, San Diego is experiencing a storm verging on a hurricane tonight. The steamers State of California and Yale arrived an hour late tonight after rough weathering from San Pedro. The light-house reports observing lights, and signals of distress, off the harbor entrance tonight, but the gale is too strong for a rescue due to the time. All shipping that is known to have this port as a destination is safe in the land-locked harbor.

Plate glass windows have been broken, awnings torn from their fastenings, cornices carried from roofs and a number of trees uprooted in the city by the strong wind. Barns and fences have been damaged in the outlying districts and telephone and telegraph service is being maintained under difficulties. The rainfall up to 6 o'clock was .45 of an inch for the 24 hours.

NILES CHAMBER HOLDS ELECTION OF OFFICERS

NILES, March 9.—M. V. Jones, pastor of the local Congregational church, was elected president of the Niles Chamber Commerce at its last regular meeting. Other officers were elected as follows: Hugh Mason, vice president; J. Jacobson, secretary; M. J. Connors, treasurer; M. P. Sneden, John Barnard and George Sullivan, directors.

Frank Rose, George F. Sullivan and C. Runckel were elected delegates to the Associated Chambers to take office at the expiration of the terms of the incumbents and to hold same for one year.

EGG SHIPMENT BREAKS TWELVE-YEAR RECORD

ESCONDIDO, March 9.—In the twelve and one-half years which Ed. J. Hatch has been the local agent of the Walls, Fargo Express Company, Tuesday's record for the shipment of eggs beat the record for one day's shipment, the sum of eggs shipped by the two trains for the day being 104,175. This is 2,134 dozen, or 32,448 eggs. The nearest approach to this mark was two weeks ago Tuesday, when the shipments for the day were 70 cases.

MILL WAGES TO BE ADVANCED

Textile Workers of New England Will Profit by the Conference.

BOSTON, March 9.—As a result of the most important conference looking to a settlement of the Lawrence textile strike, held today at the State House, at the instance of the legislative committee on conciliation, it was agreed to advance the wages of all mill operatives in New England. Today's conference was the second meeting at which agents of the American Woolen Company and a subcommittee of the Industrial Workers of the World's strike committee at Lawrence had met in the presence of the legislative conciliation committee.

It was hoped that the American Woolen Company would be able to offer such a raise in wages as would induce the strikers to go back to work. It was reported that this raise would be from 6 to 15 per cent, the average being 7.5 per cent. While the advances agreed upon today have not been definitely announced, the 5 to 15 per cent increase is generally accepted as about the figure decided upon. The increase will benefit between 20,000 and 22,000 operatives, bringing the total number of mill operatives in New England who will participate in higher wages this month up to about 80,000. The Lowell advance will become effective March 25, and that in Salem March 11.

SHAMROCKS WILL BE DISTRIBUTED BY CITY

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—Arrangements have been made by the park commission to provide loyal Irishmen with a spray or plant of shamrock on St. Patrick's Day. Shamrock is grown in the nursery in Elstian Park, and each year the park department arranges to give away quantities of the plant.

A place will be provided, probably at the city hall, where all who desire a piece of the original Irish green for decoration or for planting may call and receive it free of charge.

The department has acknowledged the receipt of a quantity of Irish furze from James Powles, of Franklin avenue, Hollywood, which will be planted in Griffith Park.

Powles stated that he had shipped direct from Ireland, and in a letter offering it to the department he said that he is a native of the Emerald Isle and would like to see the mountain slopes yet, one with furze like the hills of the old country.

MILLIONAIRE AND BRIDE REACH S. F.

George A. Browne and Mrs. Browne on Steamer City of Para.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The steamer City of Para, which came into port this morning from Panama, brought as passengers George A. Browne, millionaire director of the St. Paul and Northern Pacific, and his bride, who was Margaret Ridgely, a well-known society girl of Baltimore. The couple was married in New York five weeks ago after a pretty romance and the journey to Balboa and this city is in the nature of a honeymoon. They are staying at the Bellevue in this city, but will leave shortly for Tacoma, where they will make their future home.

A year ago, while Mr. Browne was touring the East on business, he met the present Mrs. Browne at a social affair in Baltimore. He was struck by her pleasing ways and after returning to the West opened communication with her.

It was while sitting in a cafe one evening that he heard the strains of "Maryland, My Maryland," and his thoughts wandered back to Baltimore. As his business affairs were in such shape that he could leave at any time, Browne hastened East and the marriage in New York was the climax to his romance.

Regarding the song of "Maryland," there is a coincidence, in that the great grandfather of Mrs. Browne, John Edgar Howard, the Revolutionary war figure, is mentioned in the line, "Remember Howard's warlike thrust for Maryland, my Maryland."

The young bride is the daughter of Otto Ridgely of Hampton, Md., a little suburb outside of Baltimore. She made her debut in Baltimore society two or three seasons ago and is pretty and accomplished.

One Rhode Island Red hen made the remarkable record of 75 eggs for the three winter months. If she maintains this record for the balance of the year she will produce exactly 300 eggs in 12 months. She has several other hens following close behind her.

WELL SATISFIED.

While the record for January is much lower than that of December, yet, considering the weather, the birds all came through the severe spell in apparent better health than they had been at any time since the contest began, and the month of February with a better yield, the contest was well satisfied with it. The thermometer remained from 4 to 24 degrees below zero for 15 days, and the ground was covered with snow and it was said to be one of the severest continued cold spells ever known in this section. These fowls being kept in small, open houses and in very small flocks, they would naturally be affected much more than if they were in larger houses and in larger flocks. We are pleased to report, however, that the birds all came through the severe spell in apparent better health than they had been at any time since the contest began, and the month of February with a better yield, the contest was well satisfied with it.

As the weather moderates we expect to see the Leghorns and other breeds pass these which are now.

This laying contest is under the supervision of the State University of Missouri. The pens mentioned consist of four hens and one cock. There is a fifth hen held in reserve in case of sickness of one of the others. The contest is for a period of one year and commenced last November.

Truly yours,
F. D. BAKER.

DOG TRIPS SKATER AND HE IS SERIOUSLY HURT

MARICOPA, March 9.—C. W. Perkins, a drifter who resides in this city, fractured both bones of his right leg when he was accidentally thrown to the floor while skating at the roller rink here. The fracture is about two inches above the ankle, while the other is two inches higher.

Perkins was skating when a dog ran under his feet, tripped him and sent him crashing to the floor, the limb doubling up under his body.

ST. LEO'S CHURCH CHOIR TO GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Soloists of St. Leo's Choir.

The choir of St. Leo's church is preparing to give an elaborate entertainment at St. Mary's auditorium on the evening of March 19. The entertainment will be in the nature of a celebration of St. Patrick's Day. The program, which will be lengthy, will be made public as soon as it has been settled upon. The members of the parish are all working hard to make a success of the affair, and indications already are that the hall will be taxed to its fullest capacity to accommodate the audience which will be present. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of St. Leo's church.

Among those who will take part in the affair are the church soloists, Mrs. H. Allyn, Miss Nellie Molinas, Mrs. R. Cunningham and Miss Eva Garcia.

NEW MEXICO WILL VOTE TAFT SOLID

Eight Delegates Are Taken in Heart of District Claimed for Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—With glee over the "jolt" they have just administered to Colonel Roosevelt in the rough rider country, which the former President boasted was "Alabama for him," Manager McKinley of the Taft forces announced tonight that they have cornered the entire New Mexico delegation of eight.

"This Taft victory in the heart of the country where it has been persistently allowed that President Taft was weak, together with the Fifth Virginia district and Second Tennessee district, carried today, raises the total number of delegates already chosen for Mr. Taft to 104," declared the President's political headquarters.

"The outcome in New Mexico further illustrates the fact that when the final roll is called at Chicago in June to nominate the Republican candidate for President, only a scattering vote will be cast in opposition to Mr. Taft."

NINETEEN NEW YORK DELEGATES.

McKinley said that President Taft was sure of the ninety New York delegates. One in the Roosevelt headquarters Senator Dixon was even more optimistic than McKinley. He called attention to the fact that the lower house of the Massachusetts legislature has just passed the presidential primary bill and put the responsibility for final action upon the senate.

A similar bill has been passed by the lower house in Michigan," he added, "and I feel sure that the entire delegation from Michigan will vote for Roosevelt at Chicago."

Taft sentiment in Ohio is dropping away like dead leaves, according to information received at Roosevelt headquarters.

VALLEY RESIDENT TO HEAR ABOUT ELECTRICITY

CHICO, March 9.—Work has been begun in Chico upon a big electrical demonstration car to be exhibited throughout the Sacramento valley and probably California by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

It is proposed to demonstrate to the people of the valley the various uses to which electricity can be applied. One of the features of the big car will be several apartments made to represent the kitchen, dining room and bedroom of a modern house. The electric stove with the electric iron and electric cooking appliances will be features of the kitchen. All other appliances, such as cream separators, electric fans, vacuum cleaners, in fact every electrical apparatus known or available on the coast will be on exhibition.

Complete lectures will be in charge of the various departments and an itinerant will be established just as soon as the car is equipped at the shops here.

MODERN METHODS IN DENTISTRY

Dr. Jesse B. Schafhirt Leader in His Profession.

In dentistry as in any other profession or business success depends and is due largely to modern methods, equipment and facilities. Dr. Jesse B. Schafhirt, located at Sixteenth and San Pablo avenues, and one of our city's most popular and successful practitioners, has attained an enviable reputation for splendid work. Being located as he is just outside of the exorbitant high rent district, he is enabled to charge much lower prices, although his work is considered to be the very best and such as other dentists not located as the doctor is must charge higher prices for to cover all the necessary much higher expenses.

Then again Dr. Schafhirt not only has among his office equipment a number of his own patents but also the best machinery and materials used in the profession that money and ingenuity can devise. With his wide experience and knowledge of dentistry, Dr. Schafhirt is constantly devising ways and means to increase his already large clientele by always giving his best care and work at the most reasonable prices.

JOHNSON SILENT AS TO FLIP-FLOP TO ROOSEVELT

Formally Opens the Colonel's Boom at Meeting Which Shouts 'La Follette.'

FAILS TO MENTION HIS DESERTION OF FAVORITE

Lieutenant-Governor Wallace
Slips and the Faux Pas Starts Demonstration.

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—Governor Hiram W. Johnson in a speech at the meeting in Temple Auditorium tonight, held as the formal opening of the Roosevelt campaign, declared that the sentiment of the people of the whole country was at least 3 to 1 for Roosevelt against Taft as the candidate. He predicted victory for the Roosevelt cause in the convention and asserted that the only thing that could thwart the will of the people was the use of the administration influence, the "steam roller" in the South to influence the delegates. And in that connection he uttered a note of warning. In the declaration that "no day has gone by when any man can be successful in defiance of the will of the people."

Johnson made no direct reference to his earlier support of La Follette and offered no explanation in direct terms of his change to the Roosevelt column, nor did he make any reply to the criticism of Walter L. Houser, the La Follette campaign manager, for his unexpected desertion of the La Follette standard. He contented himself with the declaration that it had become evident that one man, and one alone, Roosevelt, could lead the progressives to victory and with denunciation of those "reactionary newspapers which seek to create dissensions in the ranks of the progressive."

STEER CLEAR OF SNAG.

The audience filled the main floor and the mezzanine floor of the auditorium, and a considerable number sat in the first balcony. Enthusiasm for Roosevelt was marked, and every mention of his name and reference to his candidacy, and they were frequent, brought forth prompt applause.

For the most part the speakers steered clear of the La Follette snag. But Lieutenant Governor Wallace stumbled and the faux pas gave the La Follette champions in the audience the opportunity for a demonstration, which was easily the equal of any evoked on behalf of Roosevelt.

Wallace was paying a tribute to Johnson and told how during the campaign some one had said, "Ock this man, and we will put him on a pinnacle of the Sierra to look over to the eastward and say, 'Hail, Bristow' and to look on to the west where the senator from Wisconsin, and say, 'Hail, Roosevelt'."

It will never be known what Johnson was to say to the senator from Wisconsin, for apparently half of the audience joined in a shout of allegiance to the senator and followed it with a storm of beating hands and huzzahs that put a stop to the speech for some minutes.

LONDON IS SHOCKED AND HAPPY HON. HELEN'S TIGHTS DID IT ALL

HON. HELEN MONTAGU, attired as "The Clinging Vine," with which costume she shocked London's smart set.

Popular Society Woman of British Smart Set Appears at Fancy Dress Ball in Fleadings

LONDON, March 9.—London, staid old London, shaken from center to circumference by a woman, presents the picture of a city that would like to be shocked, but cannot. Rather a pensive expression is on the composite face of the capital's social set, though tongues are wagging and heads are shaking and rude, rude men are laughing their monodies out of their eyes.

And the Honorable Helen Montagu in tight-fitting Tights—you heard right—Tights! Of course there were outer bits of clothing and such, but the tights were there and everybody saw them, and that's all there is to it. The Honorable Helen wore them at the Momen fancy dress ball that she wore them along with other things. For instance, there was an outer skirt that revived a time-honored question, i. e., "When is a skirt not a skirt?" This had a slash that was a slash and seemed to have been made for the sole object of settling any dispute as to whether Mrs. Montagu wore fleadings.

The charming young woman said she pictured "The Clinging Vine," and to prove it displayed clusters of grapes hanging at various intervals in the neighborhood of the slash. It was an original costume and did just what the Honorable Helen Montagu intended it should, attract attention. In the meantime, London is shocked and glad of it.

AMUNDSEN REMAINS AT SOUTH POLE FOUR DAYS Southern Axis of Earth Is Located in Great Flat Waste of Snow

HOBBART, Tasmania, March 9.—The recital of the march of Amundsen to the south pole is a graphic, but simple, story of achievement.

It was on February 10, 1911, that the march to the south was begun over an open waste. The absence of landmarks made it necessary for them to plant flags to make their course and to guide their return. Between the time of their start and April 11 they set up three depots in which they stored an all 680 pounds of provisions and 220 pounds of seal meat.

During their absence the Fram sailed farther south than any vessel, just as it had previously sailed farther north.

Before the arrival of winter the explorers, eight in number, had built huts and tents for their 110 dogs and a portable house for themselves. They were snowed in by April 1. The sun left them April 12, but they were not idle. Working under the light of a powerful lamp they made a complete change in their equipment. The sledges had been found too heavy and clumsy. All the equipment was lightened up for speed. They did some scientific work and made some interesting observations.

WEATHER MILD.

The observations of temperatures showed unusually mild weather, much milder than Amundsen expected to find. The general range during the five months they were in winter quarters was from 18 to 76 degrees below zero.

On September 9 eight men and seven sledges, ninety dogs and provisions for four months started in the quest for the pole. At this time the ground was perfect for sledge work.

The next day the temperature began to fall and reached between 58 and 74 degrees below zero. The fine equipment of Amundsen and his men with furs protected them from suffering, but the dogs lost strength daily. Amundsen determined to return to the winter quarters and wait for spring, which appeared in the middle of October. At this time the temperature was from 4 to 22 degrees below zero. Amundsen changed the plan that all should go south. He determined to take only four men and the other three were detailed to start for the east and visit King Edward VII. Land.

START MADE OCTOBER 8.

On October 8 the start was made for the pole. Amundsen, his four men, four sleds and fifty-two dogs and provisions for four months was the strength of the expedition. The first part of the march was made in easy stages, in order to conserve the strength of men and animals. They made their depot in the 80th degree on the 23d stopped but a short while and went on ahead, despite a dense fog. The flags they had planted on their first trip served them in good stead as guides. The temperature remained at from 4 to 22 degrees below zero. Amundsen had intended to drive not more than thirteen to twenty miles a day, but the dogs were strong and willing and this work soon came to be a joy for them. The speed was increased.

On November 11 they reached the 84th degree and established a depot and on the 18th the 85th degree, where there was set up another depot. At this time they had been marching due south. At this point they reached the mountainous country. The nearest summits along the barrier ranged from 2000 to 10,000 feet in height. Other summits further south looked to be 15,000 feet or more.

At this point they began to climb, the first day 2000 feet. The second day they camped at the height of 450 feet.

WEATHER NASTY.

At a height of 10,000 feet Amundsen was compelled to pitch camp on account of bad weather. He remained there four days. He had to kill 24 of his dogs and keep only 118 six of each of three sledges remaining.

The greatest height attained during the march was on December 6, 10,750 feet above sea level. This was at 87 degrees 40 minutes south latitude. On December 8 bad weather was left behind. The sun shone and the marchers were able to get an observation. They found that they were at 88 degrees 116 minutes.

FLAT COUNTRY AHEAD.

Before them stretched a flat plateau. On the afternoon of December 8 Amundsen and his party passed 88 degrees 23 minutes, which was Shackleton's farthest south. They continued on to 88 degrees 25 minutes, where they camped, "farthest south" for the night. On the morning they established their last depot at 88 degrees 35 minutes.

They reached 88 degrees 39 minutes on December 7. The next day they gained 88 degrees 50 minutes and on December 11, 88 degrees 15 minutes and on December 12 they reached 89 degrees 30 minutes only thirty-five miles from the South Pole.

It was "On to the pole" now and on December 13 a mass of 89 degrees 45 minutes was attained. Up to this time the observations and dead reckoning had agreed remarkably well and they figured they should be at the pole on December 14.

To the great delight of Amundsen and his hardy band the day was clear and beautiful and with only a slight breeze from the southeast. The temperature was 9 degrees below zero.

AMUNDSEN AT THE POLE.

Sledging was perfect and they pushed forward until 3 p. m. when they came to a halt. According to their reckoning, they had reached their destination.

The flag of Norway was broken out and all lands gathered around and took hold of the standard and planted it on the spot. The last plateau was named for King Haakon.

During the night the explorers circled their camp mile after mile to a radius of twelve miles to find if any record existed of a previous visit by man or dog. For four days under the brilliant sun members of the party took observations every hour of the day for 24 hours. On December 17 the observations were at an end. Amundsen and his men fastened to the ground a little tent and broke from its top the Norwegian flag and the pennant from the Fram.

The return trip began that day and the weather proved unusually favorable. Winter quarters were reached again on January 25, 1912. The Fram left the Bay of Whales on January 26 and reached Tasmania in a month.

IS DIVORCED FROM RECTOR'S GIRL

TACOMA, Wash., March 9.—The strangest divorce suit ever tried here ended when Woolsey Aspinwall, book store clerk, was divorced from Sophie D'Antignac Aspinwall, society woman of Washington City.

Mrs. Aspinwall is the daughter of Rev. Dr. C. W. Curtis, rector of one of the Washington City fashionable Episcopal churches, with whom she lives. Her son, John Cuthbert Aspinwall, aged 18, lives with her.

Aspinwall is the son of the late Rev. William Aspinwall, who died wealthy after long service as an Episcopalian pastor in New York City. The family has been prominent there for generations.

Rev. Aspinwall left his estate in trust for a term of years to his son, Woolsey Aspinwall, now divorced, will eventually get his share, said to equal $100,000. Aspinwall sued on grounds of cruelty and desertion, and alleged that his wife, Sophie, had taken him to court, which required three hours to read in court.

Through unwillingness to remain his husband, she sought to remain his wife, alleging that her Episcopal clergyman father and all her family would be terrified if she were a divorced woman. She said they did not know of the suit being started.

The Aspinwalls were married in Washington in 1891. He had studied for the ministry, but had a position at Columbia College, Washington, earning $80 monthly. He alleged that his wife required three or more servants, trips to fashionable summer resorts, required him to take her and two friends to the Chicago World's Fair, he paying all the expenses that at the end of the first year he was $1,400 in debt, that she threatened to kill herself when he refused to obey her wishes, pulling corks from bottles of laudanum, carbolic acid and other poisons.

Six years ago, when her sister married, Aspinwall then in Nevada sought a reconciliation, but was unsuccessful. Sophie D'Antignac Aspinwall denied she drove her husband into debt, alleging her father gave them $50 per month allowance and other sums that Aspinwall pawned her wedding gifts and heirlooms several times.

GIRL CHASES THIEF WHO STOLE FROM HER COUNTER

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 9.—Miss Bertha Abernathy, a girl in a dry goods store, chased and captured George Dirks, who had stolen lingerie from her counter. Miss Abernathy waited on Dirks and when he left she noticed he carried something under his overcoat. She followed him and secured several articles missing. Hotless, the girl dashed out of the store and down the street. A mounted officer soon followed her. Following the officer came an automobile with the store's manager.

After running three blocks she found Dirks and pointed him out to the officer and the arrest followed.

FALLS OUT OF BED AND IS KILLED BY SHOCK

OMAHA, Neb., March 9.—George E. Pritchett, a prominent attorney in Omaha, died as a result of falling out of bed. Pritchett was formerly a member of the State Legislature and later a United States attorney for the Nebraska district.

Early in the morning members of the family heard a fall in Pritchett's room. The housekeeper found him lying by the side of the bed, unconscious. Physicians found his arm and shoulder broken. There were wet, but Pritchett died shortly afterward from the shock of the fall.

STOCKS SHOW LITTLE CHANGE

Remain Quiet But Firm; Standard Oil Has Tendency to Be Reactionary.

(By E. C. FORBES.)

NEW YORK, March 9.—Stocks were quiet but firm throughout the short session today. The final quotations were not materially changed from those of yesterday. Standard Oil stocks were reactionary. The Steel Trust announced an increase of orders on its books of 71,494 tons for the month of February. The bank statement showed a decrease of surplus reserves of $4,532,450. Lehigh Valley and 800 shares were active on an advance late in the day. Suspension of the stock exchange firm of Connor & Co had no influence on the market, as the firm had no market commitments having been in liquidation for more than a year because of the hopeless illness of its senior partner, E. S. Connor.

ASKS $10,000 FOR DISPLAY OF PHOTO

PORTLAND, March 9.—Alleging that her picture was displayed in the theatrical advertisements of "The Prince of Tonight" company, which showed at the Bangsboro in May, 1910, and that she was represented falsely to have given out at an interview under the name of Lillian Pleasant, of the characteristics and habits of chorus girls, Mrs. Mario Rose Giere, a Portland woman, has brought an action against the Princess Amusement Company for $10,000 damages. Service was had on Henry Pearson, manager of the company, at the Helling theater.

FRIENDS SHOCKED.

The complaint was filed by Attorney L. C. Garrison, representing the plaintiff. Mrs. Giere says she is the wife of Albert Giere, and has a wide circle of friends who were scandalized at the announcement that she had assumed the role of a chorus girl in the company and at the sentiments attributed to her in the alleged interview. Both were false, she says.

Mrs. Giere states that the false representations of the company caused her great mental distress and anguish, and have been detrimental to her reputation among her friends and acquaintances. She places the damage at $10,000.

MARKET IRREGULAR

LONDON, March 9.—Idle trading carried through today's session on the stock exchange and the tone of the market was irregular. Home stocks were easier under the influence of professional selling before the fortnightly settlement next Tuesday. Consols were unchanged, mining shares were firm. # COMPENSATION AMENDMENT IS EXPLAINED

Adoption Merely Gives Legislature Power to Make the Law Compulsory.

PROVISION ELECTIVE WITH STATE EMPLOYERS

All Are Under Law of Liability for Damages Resulting From Negligence.

The following authorized statement from the Industrial Accident Board is of interest:

A mistaken idea has gained wide acceptance that the compensation amendment to the Constitution of California, voted for by the people last October, and adopted by a huge majority, made the "compensation" provisions of the Roseberry liability law compulsory upon all employers. This idea has gained especial credence among farmers of California, and they feel that they are now made responsible for all injuries to their employees through accident, whether or not they, themselves, or any of their employees were blameworthy for such accident.

Such is not the fact. The adoption of Amendment 10 merely gave the Legislature power to make such a law compulsory, but that power has not been exercised and is not likely to be until the people of the state have had opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with the statute and the principle of "compensation" as applied to instances of personal injury through accident.

The "compensation" provisions of the Roseberry liability law are "elective," and until an employer notifies the Industrial Accident Board that he desires to do business under "compensation" neither he nor his employees are under the compensation provisions of said law. Those provisions of the law of liability are to them as though they did not exist.

LAW OF LIABILITY.
But, all of the employers of labor in California who have not "elected" to accept the "compensation" provisions of the Roseberry act are under the law of liability for damages resulting from negligence, just as they have been ever since California came into the possession of the United States of America, save that the old common-law defense of "assumption of risk" and "fellow servant" have been abolished and the rule of "contributory negligence" has been somewhat modified.

In short, the liability of an employer not under "compensation" to an employee injured by accident is, under the amended law, almost exactly identical with the liability of such employer to any citizen not in his employ. The case still goes to a court for adjustment, and not to the Industrial Accident Board, jury rights are preserved and the measure of liability will be the will of the jury and the sanction of the court rather than a liability limited in amount by statutory provision, as would be the case under "compensation," if elected. This explanation is made in the interests of a mooted issue here, where much confused thought and information.

Kaiser Honors Famous German Woman Botanist

FRAU PROFESSOR KEMPNER

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—Through a recent appointment of the Kaiser, Frau Kempner is now the second woman in Germany to earn this distinction. The first woman to receive this degree was the Countess Linden, who is connected with the University of Bonn.

Frau Professor Kempner, who was formerly Mrs. Rabinowitch, lived in Switzerland for a time, and she became famous through her researches as a botanist. Later she went to Berlin to assist Professor Robert Koch.

When the University of Pennsylvania asked her to come to this country to found a department of bacteriology, she spent her winters here engaged in this work and her summers in Berlin. She is a Russian by birth.

COULDN'T LIE; ON PROBATION

George Washington Is Truthful Man, and the Judge Appreciates It.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—He was George Washington the Second, and he'd would never tell a lie, and so he promised Superior Judge Lawlor this morning that he would be good, and together with his companion, Walter Monroe, he was admitted to probation.

George Washington is a colored mascot for one of the regiments recently sent south, and in a playful manner on December 9 he stole a kimono from Mammie Boatwright, and when the police swooped down upon him he was doing buck and wing, attired in the multi-colored garment. "Will you be good?" inquired Judge Lawlor this morning in questioning both regarding their ability to keep straight.

"My name is George Washington, your honor," replied the gentleman, "and I wouldn't say it if I didn't mean it."

Monroe answered in the same strain and both were let go.

STRUCK BY AUTO; DRIVER ARRESTED

Man Injured by Machine While Waiting to Cross Railroad Tracks.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—While crossing the railroad tracks at Third and Berry streets at 3 o'clock this afternoon E. Wendt, a member of the Lumbermen's Association, was run down by an automobile and painfully hurt. A train had just passed, and Wendt was waiting an opportunity to cross when he was struck by the machine driven by A. Erickson of 396 Guerrero street.

The front of the car passed over him, and he received two broken ribs, lacerations of the scalp, bruises of the face and body and possible internal injuries. Erickson stopped and picked up Wendt, taking him to the machine to the Central Emergency Hospital. He was later arrested by Patrolman O'Connell and charged a the Bush-street station with battery.

Tuesday—the last day

Tuesday morning the doors of this old store will be opened to the public for the last time.

Wednesday morning the gigantic task of moving will begin.

Saturday afternoon and evening, March 16th, the new Capwell's will be opened with a public reception where a warm welcome will be given all our old friends and many new ones. No goods will be sold at that time. The swinging open of these doors is also an announcement that our exclusive Fashion Show and Easter Exhibit is ready for your inspection and enjoyment.

Now, that we shall not again tell you in detail of the merchandise to be sold in this old store we want to say to you with the utmost sincerity and gratitude—just two words—

Thank you

We know that it is you who have made possible the success which finds its result in the new, larger and far more magnificent home than our first most sanguine hopes ever led us to believe we could build. It is due to your confidence in our store, our merchandise and our business methods and whatever measure of success we may attain in the new store that same public confidence will be the keynote.

And now the two final removal sale days which we want to make memory days to you

Whatever is left, that is not to go with us, is yours at the littlest prices. As the sale has lasted a week longer than we expected only small quantities of sale goods remain in a few of the departments. In others the sale articles already bear their lowest removable prices, which are exceedingly small compared with their real worth—in still other sections, where quantities are larger, prices have been slaughtered again for complete clearance. With the exception of the suit section, sale merchandise will be found for the most part on the counters where you may come and select at leisure. We urge, on account of the crowds, that you shop early if possible.

SANOT ISLAND, Va., March 9.—After being buried alive for seventy-four hours, Smith Moss, a negro welder, was rescued from a cave-in shaft here. When brought to the surface the first object that met Moss' gaze was a coffin, which had been brought by the rescue party for the reception of his body.

GIRL IS SUFFERER FROM PECULIAR SLEEP

LA CROSSLAND, Wis., March 9.—Miss Jessie Pratt, aged 12, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pratt of La Crosse, is suffering with a peculiar sleep. At times she is unconscious and at other times she is wide awake.

BEAUTIFUL FIGHT IS BREWING IN STATE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

THE KNAVE

NEW YORK HAS A DANCE--WOW, BUT IT IS A HUMMER

AN FRANCISCO, March 9.—Of course when the Republicans fight in California everybody pays attention. It is the dominant party and its actions are spied upon, talked about, criticized.

But there's one of the finest fights we've had in a long time brewing and stewing in the Democratic party right now. The Democrats have had so little for so long that people have come to regard them as a sort of negligible quantity. But this is a queer year—and the Democratic fight is going to be fast and furious.

There's a chap down south named Schoonover, who is on the Wilson ticket; and he has been saying things of Theodore A. Bell, one of Democracy's choicest martyrs. Bell is the head and front of the Champ Clark movement. He dearly loves a lingual battle. I wait to hear him on Schoonover.

Then there's Jimmy Phelan of the Wilson company. He can no more help saying sarcastic things about Bell and his crew than the onion can help being odorous when macerated. I await with feelings of pleasurable anticipation the clash of Bell and Phelan—both able men.

Take a Header, Down You Go

In the midst of all this—or in the beginning of all this—do you notice that Gavin McNab and the Hearst following have ducked? They're out of it. Their voice is not heard.

You'll not find Tarpey or Gaffey or McNab or any of the Hearst men on the Champ Clark ticket that will be announced tomorrow. In the good old opera bouffe, "Olivette," is a song that Cogulicot sings:

"That is the time for disappearing!
Just take a header—down you go!
And when the sky above is clearing
Bob up serenely from below!"

So it is evident that though Hearst will support Champ Clark he isn't going to force any of his friends into the Wilson-Clark jam and let them get their political toes pinched.

Wait Till the Women Get at Him

The Wilson men made a fatal blunder in getting up their ticket if they expect to appeal to the women voters. That fatal blunder is George S. Patton—the Harry Hotspur of the South.

Patton is able, rich, clean. He has an ambition to be United States Senator. He is a Virginian, with all the fire and chivalry of the south. Wilson is a Virginian, and so Patton is strong for him. So it seemed natural that he should be one of the Wilson delegates-at-large.

But this is the same George S. Patton who led the fight against female suffrage in Los Angeles. He is regarded by the southern suffragettes as a being with hoofs and horns and a tamale instead of a heart. So I expect to find the Clark managers stirring the women against Patton, and incidentally against the entire Wilson ticket.

They're Not Registering as Democrats

There has been a theory that the labor union workmen would get back into the Democratic party this time. The Clark men said they would register as Democrats to get a whack at Wilson because of his pro-Chinese views.

But apparently labor is sick and tired of the Democratic party. The workmen seem to care nothing for Clark or Wilson. They are getting back into the Republican party as fast as they can tumble.

A Democratic friend of mine who was at some pains to go out to the Registrar's office and compile some figures, tells me that only 12 per cent of the new vote is registering Democratic. This makes it look very much as if the once dominant party was pretty nearly on its last legs so far as this city is concerned.

And Now About the Chivalry

In the good old Democratic days we had two distinct factions—the Chivalry and the Shovelry. The Chivalry was made up of the Southern gentlemen. The Shovelry meant the Irish, who then were strong in the Democratic faith and voted that way almost to a man.

The Shovelry now has split away from the party of Jefferson, Jackson, and Max Popper and is largely Republican. And now the Chivalry is split wide open.

The Missourians are for Champ Clark who is an idol in the "show me" state. But most of the other Southerners seem inclined to Wilson, who is from Virginia, and has family connections up and down the line that take in almost everybody of note. Still, Harry T. Creswell will be on the Clark ticket with some other Southrons not from Missouri. So you can see the chivalry is not charging together as they did at Gettysburg in response to "Old Peter's nod." But ten Democrats can always make more noise over a fight than a thousand Republicans.

A New Type of Automobile

You know, of course, the amount of talk created by the P-A-Y-E cars—pay as you enter. They are gradually proving a success as the people get accustomed to them, and before long everyone will wonder that there was any trouble over the innovation of their introduction.

But that wasn't the story I started out to tell. One of our leading men of religion—minister, priest, rabbi, as you will—has been a good deal criticized for his subservience to the richer members of his congregation. In one instance he has been much in a wealthy parishioner's automobile. Another parishioner said: "L. S. has a new kind of automobile now."

"What kind is that?"

"A Pray-as-You-Enter car!"

Is This Joking or Plain Perjury?

When lovely woman stoops to register as a voter she still clings to her old feminine prejudice about her age. Of course the age provision in registration is part of the scheme for the identification of the voter—a provision tending to make repeating difficult, and it was silly legislation to remove it from the requirements.

However, the no-age provision has not yet gone into force, and for some days yet the registering women must give their ages. They don't seem to regard the sacredness of an oath in such matters.

Here, for instance, was Mrs. Francis Carolan of Hillsborough, who held up her right hand and swore before the deity to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Then she said her age was 32 years.

Now all sorts of people knew Mrs. Carolan was far older than 32—probably 42. So her friends began quizzing her. To their quizzings she replied:

"Why, I just thought it was a good joke."

That sort of joshing leads people to jail in this world, and no one knows what happens to them in the next.

In the Matter of Texas Tommy

A lot of good people who do not know one dance from another, but who hate to think of anybody else having a good time, are agitating against the Texas Tommy dance on the general theory that it must be indecent.

Now of all the recent dances the Texas Tommy is by far the least suggestive. It is a very difficult and decidedly athletic dance. There is too much "hop along on the left, hop along on the right" to give any chance for the suggestive embraces that began with the loving two-step and have come along down through the grizzly bear, the bunny hug, the turkey trot and hundred variants.

But somehow the name has caught the unco guid, and the clergy and laity have set out to abolish poor Texas Tommy without knowing what it is. Their excuse might be that none but the very best dancers can do the thing gracefully—but it isn't immoral.

But See What's Coming

The fact is, there is no dance that offers so many opportunities for immorality as the soft lascivious waltz. But we're more used to that now. Now I find, however, that New York has had introduced a variant of the waltz that must be a beauty. Here's the heading of a descriptive article in the New York Sun:

The Love Waltz Seen
At Cafe Martin Ball.

One Toe Skyward, Then the Lady Whirls About Parallel With the Floor.

Then, after a warmish description of the tenth anniversary ball at Martin's is this:

"Andrae and Ethel of the Folies Bergere introduced what they say are novelties—one the Sacramento squeeze and the other the love waltz. The Sacramento squeeze is a bit caloric, but in the other the girl points one toe skyward at every second step and later wraps her stockings about the man's waist and is whirled about parallel to the floor."

"Well, if that dance is coming this way, the clergy and the goodies will have something to get real busy about."

Disappearance of the Red Man

What has become of our Indians? I don't mean Poor Lo of the plains and plateau. I have no tale of firewater or agency robberies. But I refer to the Indian who not long ago was in our very midst, a familiar of our everyday life, as frequent as drinks on the cocktail route.

I refer to the cigar store Indian.

Now, we all remember when a noble chieftain or buxom Pocahontas stood in front of every cigar stand, solemnly offering the passer-by a bunch of what yve used to call and spell "segars." I asked a lot of men at the club the other day if they knew of one such figure in San Francisco. None could tell me where to find one.

They are gone, these noble red men. They have disappeared from the land. Sadly they have given way before the march of progress. They knew not Gunst, they heeded not the tobacco trust, and they are gone—gone and almost forgotten.

State Jobocracy and Third Term

That was a remarkable gathering at the Palace Hotel the other day, when McCabe and Company assembled the State Jobocracy for the funeral of La Follette and the resurrection of Roosevelt.

Had a foreign steamer come into port that day, it might have supposed that San Francisco was abandoned, so completely had the Harbor force been drafted to create an attendance. Any person, not a job-hunter under the State administration, who was present seemed a curiosity. There were hardly any such. It was a crowd who believed in a government of job-holders, by job-holders, and for job-holders.

There was some division of opinion as to the name of the new movement. Some thought "T. T. T.," meaning Third Term Teddy. One humorous person suggested "Joblots," but a patriot from the waterfront fodder-brigade observed that it should be reversed—instead of being "Joblots," "Lots of Jobs."

Another member of the reformed Push, to wit: The old Push, renamed, suggested "On to Our Jobs."

These frivolous persons were rebuked by a sanctimonious gentleman from Los Angeles who said it was blasphemous to speak the sacred word "Job" thus sacrilegiously as, from reading the Scripture he had discovered that the Book of Job was there given large importance.

As no solution could be reached, the question was referred, for determination to McCabe and Company, of Sacramento.

Mayor Rolph and Brandenstein

Mayor Rolph, this early in the campaign, has had to administer a sound spanking to one of his commissioners—Henry Brandenstein.

No sooner had Brandenstein become firmly anchored in the Fire Department than he formulated a plan of uniting the Fire Department and the Police Department for riot calls and other extraordinary disturbances.

The plan required extra drilling of both Police and Fire Departments, which added to the heavy burdens that the men now bear for their regular duties.

It would have been a very serious affair for the men, and a great outcry went up all along the line.

Then, the Labor Unions—who were none too friendly to Brandenstein—surmised that this was intended as a municipal movement to suppress them in case of trouble, and they prepared to take action. They did not have the opportunity, however, as Mayor Rolph completely suppressed Brandenstein before he had a chance to make an effective move.

However this matter has impressed upon Mayor Rolph the dangers of appointing tactless men to office. Such appointments ruined Phelan and destroyed Taylor.

Bell's Bad Faith to Tarpey

While the Republicans are having their troubles, the Democrats are not without their immediate sorrows. Difficulties have arisen in the Champ Clark campaign.

Michael Tarpey is for Clark, but he is neither saying nor doing anything, and his mighty host of friends have not been summoned to rally at the front.

Tarpey was, for many years, National Committee-man from California.

It occurred to his friends that, if he were to be the wheel-horse of the Clark campaign in California, his services should be recognized by the restoration of his old position.

The proposition was laid before Theodore Bell, who has appointed himself generalissimo of all matters bearing the name "Clark."

Bell frowned upon the matter. He said that he had disposed of the National Committee-ship of California to Senator Sanford of Mendocino, and that the bestowal of that position by himself would not be withdrawn.

Tarpey's friends throughout California—and they are legion—are sore at Bell's act of bossism, and are likely to be indifferent in the primaries.

Woodrow Wilson

But the Clark boomers are not the only ones with anxieties.

The Woodrow Wilson movement began with a hurrah, but has lapsed into silence. One of its principal hurdles was raised by the nomination of Edward Robeson Taylor for delegate.

When Taylor was elected Mayor, largely through the efforts of the regular San Francisco Democracy, he repudiated all obligations to that organization. In fact, he sneered at it—declared its members politicians, producing from them the sarcastic retort that "the difference between them and the ancient Mayor was that he held a job and they did not hold any," adding that he began his job-holding in the time of Governor Haight, as Private Secretary, and had proven himself a valuable trencherman ever since.

However that was, and regardless of which side was right, Taylor thereafter allied himself with the Bell minority faction in San Francisco politics, distributed all the jobs to them and was dubbed by the majority "The Pharisee Chairman of the Holier-Than-Thou Club."

Now, all of Bell's forces have been transferred to Champ Clark, and therefore, Taylor is without a constituency. But Taylor the venerable barnacle of the Hastings Law College, refuses to be scraped off the ticket.

The Regular Democracy, meanwhile, would like to see the old man scalped.

Bell is laughing very much, as his people say, the Wilson followers are carrying a dead man that they do not dare to unload.

In the meantime, the situation is giving ex-Mayor Phelan—the real head of the Wilson movement—very great concern, and the Wilson campaign is paralyzed.

Purchase of Irrigation Securities

A matter of great moment to California and of particular concern to the upper Sacramento valley is the purchase through Henry Brunner, of Paris, of five million of the bonds issued by the Kuhns on their irrigation project in Colusa, Glenn and Tehama counties.

This is the largest single purchase of irrigation securities ever made in this State. It means that the Kuhns will now have ample funds to finance their ambitious project, which is the complete irrigation of Glenn and Colusa counties, part of Tehama and the upper portions of Yolo.

The number of people settling in the upper Sacramento valley, through these lands and irrigation movements, with their extensive advertisements throughout the United States, is but little appreciated. It is freely predicted that, within ten years, the population of that area will at least triple.

The interest that French capital has taken is quite new, and speaks of the great influence that our former Californian, Henry Brunner, is exercising in French money markets.

The Haggin Grant

Another successful land enterprise was the subdivision of the big Haggin grant—the Rancho del Paso—at Sacramento.

When a local syndicate of Sacramento capitalists purchased this big grant, on the installment plan, at a big price, it was prophesied that they would have it on their hands for years to come.

The contrary has been the experience.

Not less than three subdivisions per day have been sold to Eastern immigrants, who are able to improve their holdings immediately.

The original purchasers are reaping an immense harvest as a reward for courage, and the city of Sacramento is prospering through the expansion of its suburbs.

Tom Finn and the Third Term Fight

Ex-Sheriff Tom Finn is silent. He wants McCabe and Company to come through.

It will be remembered that the Reformers, who have changed their names to "Progressives," used to consider Finn, who was then a large part of the Schmitz administration, a synonym of all forms of political evil. Their description of the wickedness that his form of politics represented taxed rhetoric to the limit.

But, after the election of the present State administration, Finn made agreeable political arrangements as Senator, and was thereupon politically born again. He walked in the path of the righteous and sang the songs of the sanctimoniously perfect. The administration adjusted a fine halo about his head, that glowed until a week after the session of the Legislature.

Finn was obedient. Like the good dogs of the Supervisors, during the prosecution times, he lay down when told.

When he ran for Sheriff, on an anti-Rolph ticket, in San Francisco, he demanded the State administration endorsement. McCabe furnished it in the form of a letter, which Finn turned into a bill poster on the dead walls of the city, in which he rather adroitly created the impression that the Governor—not himself—was running for Sheriff. The ribald remark of the populace was that they were the "Gold Dust Twins."

However, Finn was soundly licked, and now is contemplating the situation as a man without a job.

He has no objection to a third term for Roosevelt, or a fourth, or a fifth term, or any old term, if McCabe and Company will come through with the proper political emoluments. But he will not howl for Theodore unless at the expense of the State treasury of California in the form of a substantial political job.

Therefore, the State administration will please take notice!

John Hays Hammond's Tact

In the matter of tact, John Hays Hammond, the famous mining engineer and intimate friend of President Taft, has, so to speak, a batting average of 350. While in town lately, many efforts were made to get Hammond to publicly express his opinion of "My-Hat-is-in-the-Ring" Roosevelt. To all such questions, some of them persistent and insistent, the engineer quietly replied he had no comments to make about Roosevelt's avowed candidacy for the Presidency. The night before he returned East, Hammond, while smoking and chatting with some old San Francisco friends, recalled a visit Mark Twain paid to him and his associates while they were still in prison in Johannesburg, after the sentence of death, following the Jameson raid, had been revoked by President Paul Kruger and his council. It was one dreary morning and Twain, standing on an old box, said in his inimitable way as near as Hammond could remember:

"I am happy to see so many lawyers present and only one newspaper man among the prisoners. Being in jail has its compensations, because here, at least, one is free from interruptions."

Hammond says he was not in sympathy with the Jameson raid, believing at the time that the Boers should be given a chance to reform their own government. An hour after their arrest by Kruger was learned in London, Joseph Chamberlain cabled Kruger he would hold him personally responsible for the men's lives. Hammond told his friends this warning of Chamberlain was not what saved them from the death sentence.

"Our lives were spared by one vote in the council," he continued. "Kruger informed the council before the vote was taken that we were worth more to them alive than dead because they could trade with us in settling matters of dispute with England. That was the influencing factor in the voting."

He Is Now an Auto Enthusiast

C. K. G. Billings, the millionaire owner of blooded horses in years gone by, including Lou Dillon, who trotted the fastest mile on record, 1:58 1-2, with a wind shield, is in town visiting old friends. Of late years, Billings has had little to do with the horse. Automobiles have taken his fancy. At one time he had thirty-two of them, valued on an average at $10,000 each. In the last eighteen months, it is said, he has given seventeen of them away in a quiet, unostentatious manner to friends in various parts of the country, including one man in this city. In the days of his horse-fancying, Billings had the reputation of betting anything from a cigar or suit of clothes up to a $25,000 cup, but would never wager money on a race. His horses were entered in few races where there were cash stakes. When he won on those occasions he always gave away the winnings. Pursuing the same course on the German and Russian racing circuits, he caused a big sensation, much to his surprise, because he did not think his conduct deserving of any exciting comment. Billings left the racing game after that lamentable affair in Memphis when E. E. Smather's Major Delmas beat Lou Dillon, and he preferred charges against Smathers that Lou Dillon had been "doped." He had many friends in the Memphis Jockey Club, but they quickly exonerated Smathers. Billings realized later he did a great wrong in that matter. It stood him in a bad light. Taking the advice of foolish friends, he found he had made himself ridiculous. From that time on, he became an auto enthusiast.

THE KNAVE

How About Senator Bourne?

Members of the local Oregon colony were speculating last night in their club quarters about what active part, if any, United States Senator Bourne of Oregon is to play in the Roosevelt Presidential campaign. A couple of years ago, they say, the wealthy Senator, whose hobbies are Progressive Republicanism, Oregon apples, mining stocks and $1 cigars, put up a prize of $1000 for the best essay on the reasons why Roosevelt should take a second elective term. One of the group present stated that Medill McCormick of Chicago, who had charge of the La Follette campaign and is now in charge of the Roosevelt headquarters in Washington, never would let Bourne take a hand in the Wisconsin Senator's fight, in spite of the fact that he was maintaining at his own expense Progressive headquarters in the national capital. This caused bitter feeling between the two men, and the breach is as wide as ever it was. McCormick is represented as stating that Bourne lacks sincerity and is too tricky to tie to. Strange to say, most of the local Oregonians think McCormick is right in his estimate of the man. The reason they give is that Bourne has played fast and loose with both Roosevelt and Taft. They recall he could not say things bitter enough against Taft before his nomination in 1908, and after his election was fulsome in his praise of him, and tried to curry favor with him. Failing in that purpose, he again began to denounce him. What they are wondering about now is as to whether Roosevelt will be able to patch up appearances between Bourne and McCormick after all the bitter things they have been saying about each other for a year and a half. Both men are very wealthy.

No Trace of De Sabla Jewels

So far as is known now, there is not the slightest clew to the missing De Sabla diamonds, said to be worth $75,000. The theory that they were stolen from Mrs. De Sabla's apartments at the Palace seems to be the only tenable one. This is the fourth big loss of society people's valuable jewelry in the city during the past seven years. In only one case was a recovery made. That was when Charles Templeton Crocker lost a $7000 black pearl pin and it was recovered through Tiffany's in New York. The latter had originally sold the pearl to young Crocker's father in the early 'nineties. Tiffany and other big jewelry firms in the country had been notified of its loss and instructed to purchase it, if offered them, and ask no questions. Tiffany is said to have got hold of it through a broker from a woman in Philadelphia, giving $4000 for it. Templeton Crocker always had the belief that he lost the pearl on the street in this city or on the train going to Burlingame. The police had a theory it was picked from his scarf on the crowded train. His sister's (Jennie) loss of a $35,000 necklace at a ball at the St. Francis about two years ago is still well remembered. It has never been found. Two people were suspected in this case, but never arrested. Lawyers advised the Cockers they would be mulcted in heavy damages if they arrested the parties on the slim evidence against them. They were shadowed a long time. Perhaps the couple are still being watched. The most plausible theory in this case is that the necklace was dropped in the ballroom, or in the corridor, and quickly picked up. Some months ago Mrs. B. Gordon Bromfield of San Mateo Park, while giving a tea at the Palace, lost a $5000 necklace in the Palm court. The owner always inclined to the belief that she dropped it there. It was an heirloom, and all efforts to trace it have failed.

Eccentricities of De Pachmann

The cry of "beasts," "beasts" at a Philadelphia audience the other afternoon by the erratic but artistic pianist, De Pachmann, is not surprising to Mr. and Mrs. —, who sought to entertain him in their magnificent home in the Western Addition one evening recently, while he was in San Francisco, and had invited a number of friends to meet the lion. At the dinner, De Pachmann, with startling frankness, criticised one or two of the courses. Host and hostess, with fine tact, passed the matter over lightly as being one of the pardonable idiosyncracies of genius. At times, during the remainder of the dinner, he was charming in his talk and compliments. But his moods changed quickly, and the head of the house was constantly on pins and needles. When in the drawing-room later on a gentle request was made the musician that he give some selections on the piano, in a fit of petulance, as Liszt was wont to show at times, he rushed like mad to the instrument, banged on it in a most ridiculous manner, and, then arising from the stool, said with show of temper:

"That will be enough tonight!"

Butter and Syrup on Sausages

Here is a rare type: Two years ago he blew into town and has been a permanent guest at one of the big hotels ever since. Of good deportment around the caravansary and a liberal spender, the management likes his patronage. While an enigma to the manager, he holds his own counsel and don't care a rap about the guest's antecedents. The waiters marvel at his breakfast tastes, but serve him with alacrity, because he is no mean dispenser of tips. The waiters have long ago gotten over their surprise to see him have for breakfast, several times a week, fried pork sausages lavishly spread over with butter and then covered deep with molasses syrup until they look like logs in a stream as twilight is departing. Fond of champagne is this man, so much so that recently a physician warned him if he didn't quit that kind of dissipation he would go blind.

"Well, I guess, I've seen everything worth seeing," is said to have been the blasé reply that startled the medico.

"I've made my will, have had a full share of fun, and am not afraid to die, but it does worry me to think of leaving the Tenderloin," he also remarked to the interested professional man.

The latter charged him $25 for his advice, and the hotel guest is still drinking and able to see.

A pronounced perchant for dictating letters has this man, much to the satisfaction of the official stenographer of the house. He sends many letters a month, but is considered an odd guest because never does he receive any one. His check at the hostelry is good for $1000 any old time, day or night, because a big bank not far removed promptly honors his paper whenever presented. Always in the company of himself in the hotel dining-room bar or lobby—he is "papa" to a half dozen chorus girls at and after the midnight hour. With, or without, escorts, they are all the same to him. His bills for autos, wines and suppers are, therefore, a large part of his monthly expenditures. It is said he is never alone with one, and can't be coaxed into buying them jewelry or indulging in any endearing, fool correspondence. Over fifty, well-groomed and pleasing in appearance in this mysterious and odd guest.

Will Be Honored by Re-election

George F. Richardson and John A. Britton are to be honored by the Bohemian Club with re-elections, respectively, to the offices of president and vice-president. They have already been renominated by the committee in charge and the annual election is to take place in April. They will have no opposition. Judge Harry A. Melvin was given two terms as president, Richardson being his successor. The administrations of both men have been of great good to the club.

Some years ago, a set in the institution organized themselves into what was known as "The Bamboos." The movement was a protest on the part of the artistically inclined and ultra-bohemian fellows against what they deemed the rule of the "commercial element." The Bamboos had many a good time among themselves and then quietly dropped below the club horizon. Another similar organization has just been effected. Its members have had one monthly dinner and they are about to hold a second. They have not yet given their exclusive coterie a name, and probably will not for reasons best known to themselves. They are protesting that the commercial element is in the saddle, to the detriment of the club's artistic side. The institution has a big bonded debt on its new clubhouse, in addition to heavy annual expenses. Some competent people must look after those matters. They must be properly supported, too, by the members. If they are not, the famed club, the successors to the Bamboos, with their aspirations and kicks, and all else, would soon go to the demerolion how-wows. The members of the new inner circle, with fancies beguiling, will, therefore no doubt, have their little harmless fling and then go the way of the Bamboos.

How Do You Account for It?

At the Palace the other afternoon three successful commercial men were regaling themselves with the good business they had on this coast last year, and how it is increasing for 1912. One sells whisky by the carload for eastern distilleries, while a second takes orders for pipe organs for churches and auditoriums. The third man sells steel-jails. The pipe-organ man is the only one of the trio who drinks. He, of the steel-jail business says he cured himself of both smoking and drinking two years ago through mental suggestion. The carload-whisky man says he does not know what the taste of liquor is. No matter how poor other lines of business are, he finds a good demand for whisky at all times. Men will buy liquor and go without other things. He has no scruples about his business, saying if he did not sell whisky some one else would take his place. He believes, however, in saloons being regulated. He of the pipe-organs states that the rapid increase in prosperous communities on the coast is reflected in more and better church buildings and halls. This, in turn, gives his business a good activity. The steel-jail agent says the prosperous state of his trade is not due to any great or sudden increase in the number of arrested men. He does not think there has been any noticeable increase in that respect. The replacing of old jail buildings with new ones, the repair of old ones and the partial modernizing of some with steel cages is what accounts for his activity. This is true of other parts of the country as well as this coast, he says.

Rate on Snow by Carload

"Yes, we made a rate on snow by the carload and hauled several trains of the odd freight fifty miles to Stoughton, Wis., last December."

His friends at luncheon looked incredulous, but he insisted his statement was a fact. The speaker was H. E. Pierpont of Chicago, who is spending a few days in the city. Pierpont is the general freight agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. Stoughton is a Swedish settlement in Wisconsin, he went on to explain. The people are fond of winter sports, particularly the exciting sport with the ski. They had prepared their incline for this pastime for the middle of last December. For the first time in many years, the locality had no snowfall and the people were greatly concerned for their annual winter amusement. There still being no snow a week before the event, their committee asked Pierpont what he would charge to haul several trainloads of snow from a point thirty miles away, where there was plenty. He made them a very cheap rate—one, in fact, just to cover expense of hauling, their own people doing the loading and unloading. They got plenty of snow to cover the incline and entire hillside and Stoughton had the time of its life skiing, snow-balling and doing the toboggan stunt for a week.

Lawyers Failed to Get Fees

The recent death of a prominent lawyer recalls how his law firm was purposely disrupted so that the remaining partners might enjoy the fees from a big estate they confidently expected to be made the attorneys of. Charles P. Eells, a fine personality, an able lawyer and now a partner of Attorney Goodfellow, was the man frozen out of the firm in question. The estate the remaining partners in the latter expected to handle all by themselves was that of Mrs. Lloyd Tevis. Able members of the bar were so indignant over the treatment given Eells that they acted quickly and had enough influence to throw the attorneyship for the big property into other hands, promising in this connection to give their own services free to the estate should it ever call on them. This unexpected turn of affairs, a veritable boomerang, was a great shock to the reorganized, designing firm and caused much feeling and gossip at the time. The Tevis estate profited greatly by this sensational affair. It had less attorneys' fees to pay during its settlement than any other large property in the history of California. The episode was probably the only one of its kind in the history of the San Francisco bar. The legacy of hate it left behind is still a marked influence in certain circles.

Train de Luxe Bath Idle

Are bathrooms on the Overland Limited trains, the trains de luxe, as they are now being called, worth while?

It is quite an expense to have this modern convenience as part of the make-up of a train. It also costs something to maintain a bath. As an advertisement, it is very catchy. Some railroad officials think that is about all it is good for. The officials of a certain company have just completed a careful study of trainmen's daily reports on how many passengers make use of this convenience. The result is discouraging from the standpoint of demand for the bath. Taking at random some of these daily reports, it is said, that on twenty trips of a certain Overland Limited train, ten trips each way, only eleven persons saw fit to use the bath. At fifty cents per bath, this meant for the twenty trips $5.50. On these trains sixty per cent of the passengers made the through trip, or, in other words, were continuously on board between three and four days. About 1500 people were carried on these trains, so only about a half of one per cent of them patronized the bath. Five times as many on the same trips had their clothes pressed and a hundred times as many patronized the barber shop. The officials have a de luxe train bath is so little used. They are not going to abolish it, however. In time, they think it will come into its own. But even if not, it is too attractive an advertisement to dispense with.

Eager to Increase Deposits

Four of the big national banks of this city are in a great fight to get the lead in amount of deposits, of which today they have in the aggregate $110,000,000. The Bank of California's latest official report shows it to have $33,843,000 of deposits in round numbers. This includes, however, the deposits of its branch banks in Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and Virginia City, Nevada. Without these, it is said, it takes rank below both the Anglo & London-Paris and the Wells-Fargo Nevada. The latter has $27,000,000 of deposits in round numbers, while the former reports $28,000,000. This puts the latter today in the lead, giving the Bank of California third place and the Crocker National Bank the fourth place with $20,714,000 of deposits. There is some feeling, too, shown in this competition and representatives of the institutions seek new accounts with the same zest of a fisherman whipping a trout stream. Some of them can spot unerringly a new man come to town with money and they give him no peace until he opens an account. A certain easterner had four of these people after him in one day. One of them finally landed him in his establishment.

In capital and surplus and undivided profits the Bank of California is in the lead. Wells-Fargo Nevada is second. Anglo & London-Paris has the third rank in this respect, with the Crocker National in the fourth place.

Odd Test for Getting Job

Reports from New York are to the effect that Mrs. Duxie Rosenbaum-Rodgers-Dunne has accepted a settlement in her libel suit against the New York World, which over a year ago published an article reflecting on her character. The article had to do with her alleged conduct in this city years ago. Mrs. Dunne denied the truth of the story. Having plenty of money she made a most stubborn and determined fight. The report does not mention the nature of the settlement. In seeking testimony to defend itself against her suit the World sent a man named Slade, one of its shrewdest representatives, here. He was at work in this city for several months. As a result of his work a lot of people in this city had to appear before a commission and give their depositions. I do not know their nature. But to return to Slade. He was hired by the late Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the paper, after he had gone blind. As the story runs, Pulitzer in his blind days hired men after feeling of their faces and heads with his hands as well as after conversing with them. In this way he formed his judgment as to their worth to him. Slade had to submit to this unique process and Pulitzer was ever afterwards satisfied with his selection of him.

Wingfield's Spectacular Recreation

Barbary Coast is still talking about George Wingfield's spectacular fling through its resorts one night recently when wine galore was spilled and greenbacks were as thick as flies around a strawberry basket in the summer time. Wingfield is the multi-millionaire Nevada mining man who had not essayed a lively journey along the tenderloin for many a moon until that night. The coast dearly loves so princely a spender and had not seen one like him since George A. Lehmann, a young easterner, paid it a visit a couple of years ago. Lehmann could not get rid of his money quick enough, so he threw gold by the handfuls around. Then he went "broke" and had to appeal to friends of his family here for "first aid to the injured" in order to get out of town. Since then both his wife and mother have sought to have him judiciously declared a spendthrift. Wingfield is not of that class. He could easily buy out a hundred like the young easterner and then go some. Liberal and gentlemanly, he spent several thousands for a night of fun with some friends. They certainly had it and faded from the district before dawn by auto, whose chug-chug was drowned in their raucous chorus:

"Hi diddle, diddle, the cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon,
The little dog laughed to see such sport,
And the dish ran away with the spoon."
Now the coast is asking, not:
"Can he come back?" but—
"When will he come back?"

All the Story Not Told

Grand island, in Richardson bay, just above Sausalito, the former home of Walter J. Bartnett of bank-wrecking notoriety, is now the property and home of Cleveland people, Mrs. A. L. Pettigill and Mrs. Henry Everetts, by name. They are mother and daughter. As a company, Grand Island figured in the books of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company that Bartnett helped wreck. It was a borrower from the institution. It was in this home that Bartnett and his friends used to give full play to their belief in spiritualism, and, as disciples of Robert Dale Owen, talk learnedly of spirits and the fourth dimension. Here were held spiritualistic seances and slate writing. Some men in business here now participated in these affairs and believe in them as much as ever. Their names have escaped publicity in that connection for which they are still thanking their stars. They had no dealings with the bank and continue to think kindly of Bartnett as a most unfortunate man whose motives were all right. I considered this opinion of theirs about Bartnett strange until I heard-whisperings among some of the members of the Depositors' Association of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company that—

"Bartnett is not such a bad fellow."
Why there should be such whisperings from such a source I will not attempt to tell. An explanation of the matter has been given me and it is not a thing that either Bartnett or the whisperers should feel proud about. It is another phase of an already bad mess. All the story of that big bank failure and the woe and distress that followed in its wake has never been told. Probably it never will be told. But to digress. Grand Island is a picturesque, charming spot and its new owners are very fine people from prominent eastern social circles.

RAINFALL HELPS REALTY MARKET

Inquiry for Industrial Properties Reported by George W. Austin.

The market for the past week has been more satisfactory and in line with the general movement, I think, of the month.

needed rainfall, says George W. Austin. There has been a more general inquiry for industrial properties during the past month, and more than ever before in my experience in this business.

"Many strangers are in town, and that fact is particularly noticeable in the house building department, and also in a very large measure for the demand for homes and investment properties."

"I have associated with this office recently one of the oldest real estate men in the business in this section, N. H. Lane of San Francisco, formerly a member of the San Francisco real estate firm of O'Connell & Lane, and who will devote his attention to this office principally to industrial properties, such as water rights, factory and warehouse sites."

"I now have surveys out looking on the Berkeley ranch of 100 acres, which I purchased recently, and which is located in Redwood canyon, Contra Costa county, just over the dividing line between that and Alameda county, and on the line of the Oakland and Antioch railway, which runs through the property. My proposition is to put that tract on the market in villa sites, it being of most desirable character, as it is covered with large redwood trees and all kinds of shrubbery, fronts the main county road, has an ever-living stream running through it, and is dotted with numerous springs. It is in a sheltered spot ideal for villa sites."

"My leasing department has been very active. In fact, there has never been such a demand for leasehold as at present."

"Nearly every lot in the first subdivision of Claremont Villa has been sold."

"Among the most recent sales closed are the following:

The street work on James street, between Clifton and Hudson, which is being done by the Blake & Bilger company, is progressing rapidly, and is nearing completion. Ten houses are already under way on this tract of land at the present time.

"Boulevard Park tract, in Fruitvale, which I am handling in connection with S. S. Austin, the Twenty-third avenue real estate agent, is showing a very satisfactory number of sales."

ADVERTISING BRINGS RESULTS. "We advertising never brought the demand that it has during the past month before, and this is the first time I know of as to the actual condition of the market."

"Among the most recent sales closed are the following:

Berkeley, for J. W. Shannon to Anna Ashford.

"A house and lot on Thirty-fourth street, near Telegraph avenue, for K. Conz to Katherine Clear."

"A house and lot on the west side of Alice street, between Fourteenth and Nineteenth streets, for Edward L. Brayton to Clay H. Bush."

"Let in Oak Park tract for Leo L. Nichols to William F. Neary."

"A house and lot located at 6040 Colby street for Charles Conitt to J. T. Hinch."

"Five lots on Shafter avenue, between Clifton and Hudson streets, in Claremont Villa, to C. A. Legris."

"Three lots on Linton avenue, north of Clifton street, in Claremont Villa, to B. E. Parker."

"Let on James street, between Clifton street and Boyd avenue, in Claremont Villa, to Ray Dexter."

"Four lots on the west side of James street, north of Clifton street, in Claremont Villa, to Mary Moran."

"A house and lot located at 3019 Bridge street for Thomas Martin to D. Edward Collins."

"Ranch of five acres, with improvements, at Hayward, for D. Edward Collins to Thomas Martin."

"House and lot on the east side of San Pablo avenue, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets, for Jules Sours to Horatio Jenkins."

"Lot on the east side of Market street, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first streets, for P. F. Ferguson to Adolph Morgan."

"House and lot on Walker avenue for

ARE YOU THE BUSINESS, SOCIAL, FINANCIAL OR POLITICAL SUCCESS YOU WISH TO BE? HAVE YOU ATTAINED THE HEIGHT OF YOUR AMBITION? THERE IS A CERTAIN KNACK IN ACHIEVING HEALTH, WEALTH AND HAPPINESS THAT MANY DO NOT POSSESS. IT ISN'T ALWAYS THE BEST EDUCATED WHO ENJOYS DISTINCTION. ALL GREAT SUCCESSSES ARE ACQUIRED BY DEDUCTIVE THOUGHT, NOT BY ROUTINE WORK.

Prof. Del Martin Ph.D. the acknowledged leader and recognized authority of the occult philosophy, occult mysteries and clairvoyance makes a remarkable statement. Your greatest wish can be realized—you would not desire a thing if you were not capable of attaining it.

The All Wise Creator did not endow you with noble ideas, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love craving within your heart without at the same time placing within your reach the means of attaining these desires. If you are in trouble of any kind, or not satisfied with your condition in life, come to me and I will make this clear to you. I have helped others. I CAN HELP YOU.

I know how to control and use that power for your success and mine. If you wish to succeed in any business undertaking, consult me, I can put you on the right road. If you desire to win in love or be reunited with some one from whom trouble or estrangement separates you, I can and will help you to gain the desire of your heart. Are you tired of being poor and living that "from hand-to-mouth" existence? If so, come to me and I will show you a better way. Life is not so much of a mystery as some people would have you believe. If you had studied more into Nature's laws and learned the lessons there revealed you would know better why some people succeed and others fail.

I am successful myself. I do not make this claim in the spirit of a braggart or egotist but to enable you to appreciate what I can do for you. I have an extensive patronage and great success as the envy of all competitors. I am never idle. My motto is, Work and Win. I create my patrons to success in attaining their various ambitions. That is why I have so many of them, and why each one recommended me to his friends. I will only charge you to TELL YOUR NAME IN FULL, your occupa-

Resigns Rather Than Submit to Court-Martial

GENERAL F. C. AINSWORTH.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—General F. C. Ainsworth, who has been storm center in the army, has gone on the retired list rather than be subjected to a court martial called to consider some disrespectful language which he used in an official report concerning his superior, the secretary of war.

Because of his independence, Ainsworth has always been a thorn in the side of the war authorities. He has introduced certain time-saving methods into the records system of the department, which placed him in favor with the members of congress, and he felt that he could afford to defy his superiors, but they finally forced his resignation.

INSURANCE SCHEME CONTENTION'S BONE

Bill Starts Much Trouble, But Passes Without a Division.

LONDON, March 9.—For an act that passed through Parliament without a division that is without any member registering a vote against it, the national insurance scheme against sickness and disablement has set up a record for the extent of the controversy that has raged around it. The friendly societies, which have insurance benefits of their own for members, started the trouble. They feared that the bill, by forcing their members to contribute to the government scheme, would induce them to leave the societies. This was settled by approved societies being allowed to administer the act so far as it dealt with their members.

Then came the opposition of mistresses and servants, who, besides objecting to contributing their 6 cents weekly each for the insurance of the servant, raised a cry against the necessity of sticking the necessary stamps in a book.

Opposition also came from large employers of labor, chiefly in the cotton districts of Lancashire, who held that the extra tax would deprive them of their profits.

Other classes have taken up the cry against the bill, the Socialists among them, as they wanted a system to which the workingmen would not have to contribute, the state and employer paying the whole of the amount required.

The most serious and sustained opposition to the bill, however, has been that of the medical men, 21,000 of whom have signed a declaration that they will not accept service under the act. The chief objection of the doctors is that no adequate remuneration for the medical men could be obtained under the act. It would, in fact, amount to about 10 yearly for each patient. This is only a calculation, as the act states that the remuneration of doctors who place their names on the list of those agreeing to attend patients under the act shall be a matter of arrangement between the local insurance committees and the doctor. The medical men, however, point out that the committees consist of perhaps eighty members, only three of whom would be medical men, so that the chances of adequate remuneration are the remotest.

The medical men also object to the control by friendly societies, chiefly because they believe well-to-do people would creep into friendly societies and get medical attendance at the same rate as the laborers. Then there is objection to what is known here as the contract system. This already prevails in certain districts, chiefly among the miners, who contribute to a fund, out of which the medical attendance is provided for a fixed salary.

Those doctors who, in face of the decision of the great majority of their profession, have agreed to act under the bill are being derided as "black-legs," and the campaign is being carried on much as would a strike of trade unionists.

CARTER WITNESS IN ARMY CASE

Tells of Paymaster's Transfer, and Explanation Given by Hilles.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Major General Carter, acting chief of staff of the army, was a witness today before the House committee investigating the political activity of Paymaster B. B. Ray. General Carter said it was at the request of the War Department that Major Ray recently was transferred from Atlanta to Chicago.

"I assumed the order came from the President," said General Carter. "I received it from Secretary Hilles. I told him that I knew the history of the Ray case, and I thought there should be some reason given for the transfer, as expressed criticism Secretary Hilles told me that Major Ray would be informed that he was being sent to Chicago so that Mrs. Ray could have the attention of a surgeon there. He also said Major Ray would be there placed not to engage in any outside affairs."

Major Ray recently became eligible for promotion to lieutenant colonel, but his nomination has not been made. Major Carter said an army officer would draw the pay and emoluments of the higher rank from the day he became eligible, regardless of the time his nomination was sent in. The promotion, he said, was automatic.

TELLS OF FAMINE AMONG CHINESE

Earl H. Cressy Describes the Frightful Conditions in the Orient.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Earl H. Cressy, an American, who has recently returned from a tour of inspection of the famine district of China, relates many instances illustrative of the frightful conditions of starvation which prevailed early in February. He made a minute examination of many Chinese homes. Describing an inspection of all the houses, large and small, in several groups, a total of fifty-five houses, Mr. Cressy makes the following statement:

"A straw stack indicates that there have been a crop. I found straw in seven houses out of the fifty-five, and in no place over a peck of it. The food in process of preparation was invariably greens—sweet potato leaves or carrot tops, a thin, acrid smelling mass of the appearance of stagnant water, and about as appetizing, only once in a while containing a bit of vegetable or grain. About one out of every three was eating elm bark, which they prepare by reducing it to a fine sawdust and then making it into cakes. While some of these have thus been stripped of their bark of even such sorry food as this only a few have any great amount on hand. After it is gone they will eat the bark of the willow and mulberry, which causes swelling and hastens death. Except for these the countryside is absolutely bare."

"To look back upon it, the whole seems like a bad dream. The gloom of the wretched homes, the whirling snow, driven by the bitter wind, the hungry garrulness of the old women, the modest shyness of young men at suddenly finding themselves in the presence of a foreign man, little children crying over their pitiful food, the dumb agony on the face of the woman whom he had to tell that her husband had just breathed his last, the dead with nummy faces and claw-like feet—all this is only a small part of the grim tragedy of the famine where two and three millions are facing conditions like these."

An rapidly as contributions are received by the American Red Cross they are hurried by cable to the relief committee in Shanghai. Up to March 1, $29,000 has been forwarded. Millions are needed, because the new grain crop in China cannot be harvested for three months.

The New York relief committee, co-operating closely with the Red Cross, is urging every pastor in the United States to speak to his congregation on the famine on Sunday, March 10, and to take a collection for the starving. The Red Cross approves this request and urges universal compliance with it. The money thus collected may be sent to the New York Famine Relief Committee, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, or to the American Red Cross, Washington. In either case the amount received will be acknowledged and promptly cabled to China.

CLOSES ITS CASE AGAINST COMPANY

Defense in Golconda Cattle Trial Then Enters Denial of Interference.

CARSON, Nev., March 9.—The government concluded its case today in the trial of the Golconda cattle company, accused of having illegally fenced in 27,000 acres of range land. The defense introduced testimony tending to show the fencing did not interfere with the use of the public domain. C. P. Tilden testified that the openings in the fences allowed herds to pass freely to and from the fenced ranges. A. H. Blaine introduced to show that no barriers had existed at the places which government witnesses declared had been closed.

It was conceded that the company's fences were upon its own land, but it was contended that government land had been enclosed.

NUMBER OF TEXT BOOKS IS 1,000,000

Librarian Makes Estimate of Separate Titles Since the Invention of Printing.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—How many school text books are there? Counting separate titles only, Dr. John D. Wolcott, librarian of the United States Bureau of Education, estimates that at least a million have been published, and as many of these have been lost owing to the lack of a means of preservation. Dr. Wolcott has just established a special text book library in connection with the bureau's regular pedagogical library.

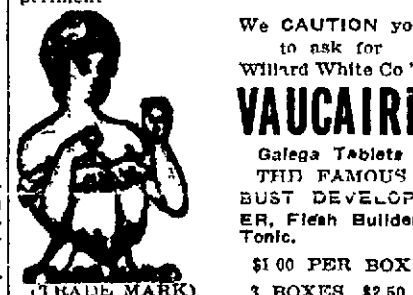

"My estimate as to the number of text-books issued since the invention of the art of printing includes both school and college text books," said Dr. Wolcott yesterday. "but does not include the books of races other than the white race. There is no way even to guess at the number of manuscript text books used by the ancients and the peoples of the East. This estimate, moreover, does not include separate editions or revisions of the same text book. If we could figure works like the old Webster spelling book, which has run into hundreds of editions, on the basis of reprinting, the number of titles I should have to raise my estimate considerably."

"On looking into this matter of text book publication I found that many important and at one time valuable works of this character had entirely disappeared, owing to the utter lack of means for their preservation, so I have decided to establish an additional library at the Bureau of Education, that will be devoted simply to the collection and preservation of text books. This special library was founded about three months ago. Already it numbers six thousand volumes, nearly all of which represent the voluntary gifts of friends, the bureau having obtained the books with no greater outlay than the government frank which is sent to the donors for the purpose of getting the books through the mails. A pretty rapid collection, at the same time we could continue at this rate of increase for forty years before even approximately catching up with the aggregate number of text books produced, as the figure stands today."

"If it were possible to assemble at this moment one copy each of all the text books put out since the printers began work, the Bureau of Education would be the possessor of a library on this one subject alone that would be half as large as the Library of Congress."

Daniel's Improvised Judgment Seat.

With shame and contrition we confess it, but as murder will out we might as well admit our abasement and humiliation before it is cast in our teeth. Sooner or later somebody was sure to cry, "Don't slink around the corner, hoping to hide; you have been up before the police judge and found guilty, and you needn't think to escape the scorn and contempt you deserve." Therefore we will blurt the evil news abroad, herald our own iniquity rather than have some watchful guardian of public morals pounce on and expose us as being under the ban of an awful judicial decree. Our sprightly San Francisco contemporary, Town Talk, asserted jurisdiction in a random discussion between the Stockton Mail and several other journals, THE TRIBUNE included, as to whether William Shakespeare or Francis Bacon wrote the plays and poems ascribed to the former (the Mail taking the Bacon end of the dispute, which was quite natural) and rendered judgment in favor of the Mail. We ventured to deny jurisdiction of the court and to question the learning of the judge. Behold, now the penalty incurred by the indiscretion. The editor of Town Talk reaffirms the original decree with considerable emphasis and with a display of temper hardly compatible with the judicial office, and summons this unhappy writer to answer at the bar for contempt of court. But without waiting for an answer or a plea in extenuation, finds the unhappy defendant guilty and passes sentence upon him. Thus by decree of the honorable court, sitting in the Town Talk office, the present writer is under sentence as a Simon Tappertit. Those who have read Barnaby Rudge will appreciate the severity of the sentence and the enormity of the offense it was inflicted to punish.

Nevertheless we survive. Since the court is no court and the judge no judge and the decree from the bench mere bean-thunder, the writer declines to shave his head and put on sackcloth and ashes or any raiment betokening shame and humiliation. Until the judge discloses his warrant of authority and gives more convincing evidence of his superior learning than he has hitherto presented, we decline to acknowledge his jurisdiction or submit to the judgment of his court. Even such obiter dicta as the judicial charge of dogmatism and ignorance of the subject the writer has ventured to discuss is not sufficient to awe him into acknowledging the jurisdiction that has been set up by the Town Talk editor.

As Andrew Jackson said of one of Chief Justice Marshall's decisions, "he has got his decision, let us see him enforce it." The judgment went into the waste paper basket, and nobody was a penny the worse for it.

The controversial method of Town Talk is not entirely original, nor is it so impressive to some as it is to others. A supercilious air of superior knowledge is not of itself proof of wide information or a candid spirit. A sneer at the other fellow, however becoming, is not always convincing, although it passes muster for lack of argument and a shortage of facts. Like the woodpecker that lighted above the schoolhouse door, the editor of Town Talk pecks at the statements made by THE TRIBUNE, but nowhere meets the issue directly or refutes the conclusion advanced. What he pecks at is mostly beside the issue. For the rest of it he depends upon unsupported assertion. That is a prerogative he will not permit others to exercise, but which he exercises in a wide latitude with ex cathedra solemnity.

Our amiable and learned friend supports the assertion that Shakespeare's death passed unnoticed by saying of Ben Jonson's memorial ode, "for the supposition is that the poem was written for the First Folio which was not printed till seven years after Shakespeare's death." So a date must be postponed seven years on account of "a supposition." Has it come to this that our volunteer Daniel's law is only "a supposition?" Then is any man at liberty to codify his imagination and convert his suppositions into statutes?

"Then it was not Shakespeare's father who cultivated the meadow of Tugton," says Town Talk triumphantly. If Shakespeare's father cultivated the meadow of Tugton or any other meadow, assuredly he was not a farmer. No farmer ever tills a meadow, and the fact that John Shakespeare owned a meadow is no proof that he did not buy and sell wool and keep a glove shop. But our logical friend insists that he cultivated a meadow and was therefore a farmer; ergo, his son could not have written "Venus and Adonis" and "A Winter's Tale." His honor must be joking. Surely he does not expect to be taken seriously when he draws conclusions from premises so unrelated, or, shall we say, misapplied?

However, we quoted testimonials from Shakespeare's contemporaries, Edmund Spenser and Sir John Davies, to prove that his talents as author and actor were well recognized when he was comparatively a young man. Also the eulogy of the author of "Paradise Lost," who was eight years old when Shakespeare died. To that may be added Ben Jonson's prose criticism entitled "De Shakespeare Nostrate." But we will not venture to pursue the subject further lest we be charged again with "vociferation" and with usurping the function of "Tappertit" to which our esteemed contemporary appears to regard as an exclusive privilege. That we have not shed any additional light on the authorship of Shakespeare's plays we cheerfully admit—that was not the purpose of this article, which was to deny his worship's power to commit for contempt and to show that the grounds on which he based his decision were insufficient, irrelevant and inconclusive. He seems to have been more intent on flouting this petitioner than on establishing his own assumptions. He has told us what this writer does not know about Shakespeare, but he is far from proving that he has any greater knowledge of the "Bard of Avon." He seems to have taken it for granted that pecking above the schoolhouse door was the real business in hand and not the title to authorship which fame has conferred on Shakespeare. He has convicted the attorney, but has failed to consider the case of Shakespeare versus Bacon. He has aired his own scholarship without illuminating the case at bar.

His decision, therefore, is a non sequiter, and an irrelevant commentation on the imperfections of this pleader, who has had the temerity to hint that Dogberry was not a master of jurisprudence, and who is not now disposed to admit that the corroboration of one case by another can transform folly, however solemn and pretentious, into wisdom.

"Come in, the water is fine," said the seven governors. Teddy accepted the invitation, and now finds himself a shivering victim of political cramp. He will go up Salt River to thaw out.

"Colonel Roosevelt says he will not accept a third party nomination," says the Hanford Journal. He also said he would not accept a third term nomination.

How the Old World Has Fared During the Past Week

Roosevelt as a Conservationist.

"It was Roosevelt who first brought the country to appreciate the value of its water-power and to understand the necessity of regulating its use, and his policy has since been approved, both by Congress and the country," says the California Outlook, official organ of the Governor's bread-and-butter brigade.

This is a fair sample of the kind of stuff the Roosevelt boomers are passing out as statements of fact. Private enterprise had demonstrated the value of water-power long before Roosevelt became President. It was a realization of the vast potentiality resting in the flow of streams that awakened the public mind to the necessity of adopting measures to prevent monopolists from gaining possession of all valuable water-power privileges appertaining to the public domain. Roosevelt talked a lot about conserving natural resources, but he never suggested any plan by which water-power could be conserved and at the same time utilized.

"He (Roosevelt) withdrew from the public domain 140,000,000 acres and placed it in forest reserves, and founded the conservation system of regulation which has since come to be recognized as of the greatest value to the present generation and to posterity," continues the Outlook.

What nonsense! Such sonorous, rolling turgidity may impress the ignorant and unthinking, but the person who puts it forth is casting insult on popular intelligence. The policy of creating forest reserves was inaugurated during the administration of Grover Cleveland. Legislation giving the President power to set aside portions of the public domain as forest reserves was introduced in Congress before Cleveland became President. One of the first of these bills was introduced by Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, late Speaker of the House. It became a law, too, and under it two large forest reserves were created.

Roosevelt founded no system of conservation or regulation. He exploited for political effect a system already established. What his predecessors had done quietly and without flourish of trumpets he appropriated as his policy.

So far as conservation of water power is concerned he did nothing but prevent its use. By including vast areas of mountain grazing lands bare of timber in forest reserves, he placed obstacles in the way of the development of the inter-mountain region. Water power sites in the forest reserves could not be utilized till Congress passed laws providing for their lease or sale, and no such laws have ever been passed. Roosevelt declaimed to Congress of the advantage to be derived by conserving natural resources, but he never recommended to the national legislature any plan allowing water-power on the public domain to be utilized under conditions which would protect the people from imposition and monopoly. He simply talked in the air in general terms about a proposition on which there was no disagreement as to purpose.

To sum it all up, Colonel Roosevelt did not originate the policy of forest and water-power conservation and he has never to this day suggested a system of regulation that would permit utilization.

WILLIAMS AND THE FARMER

It would pay this State to give Bank Commissioner Williams a salary to go away—a long way away—and stay there. This man knows nothing about banking. In order to make a job for him it was necessary for the Legislature to strike from the law the provision that the bank commissioner should be a man familiar with banking business. Williams was a protégé of the Howells and had to have a job. The law was in the way. Hiram told the reformers to reform the law and they reformed it. It was a costly job to the State. The banks are harassed by this incompetent job-hunter until they are in despair. They don't dare to air their grievances, because they are at Williams' mercy. Never was a political henchman put in possession of so much power as this beneficiary of the new State political machine. The old ring never tried building business. The latest of Williams' bad breaks is to order country banks to throw out farmers' warehouse receipts for grain and not receive them as security for advances. We wonder how many farmers will vote for this sort of thing next time.—Stockton Mail.

SEES YEAR OF WAR

PARIS.—Every year at this season there is anxiety and suspense among worldly, superstitious Parisians. Eagerly they ask one another, "What will she say?" Still more eagerly they continue, "When will she say it?" Then, their eagerness and impatience increasing, numbers of these particular Parisians visit a certain tranquil thoroughfare and strain their eyesight by staring up at the first-floor windows of a certain tall house, but see nothing, for the windows are closely curtained.

And well may they be closely curtained! For behind them sits Mme. de Thebes, most celebrated of French soothsayers, also an ornament of smart Paris society. And as thus she sits, unapproachable, invisible, she is importantly engaged in casting the horoscope of the whole world and the whole of mankind for Anno Domini 1912.

This year Mme. de Thebes has been later than usual in issuing her annual and international horoscope—but the delay is doubtless due to the overwhelming events that are going to happen in 1912. For 1912 is going to be lurid and sinister. Here, briefly, on the word of Mme. de Thebes, is the history of odious, atrocious 1912:

War, which will wreck Europe and other continents as well.

Conspiracies. Assassinations. Total ruin of Paris. Downfall of the German emperor. Riots.

Epidemics. Evil destiny for England. Fugitives and bloodshed in Spain. Tears and misery everywhere.

LONDON.—Zadkiel's Almanac, the popular book of prophecy, is out, and he is unable to prophesy anything very favorable for the sovereigns of Europe.

For the first four months of 1912 the Kaiser will be busy with negotiations with his allies and other potentates, and will find a difficulty in keeping clear of entanglements and awkward controversies. The czar and the King of Spain are threatened with some rather unpleasant experience of the power of old Saturn in or about the month of June.

As far as Great Britain is concerned, the six-penny prophet states that the spring will be marked by political tumult and a serious risk of foreign warfare, consequent upon the breaking of a treaty, binding upon Great Britain, by a foreign power.

However, it will all end happily, because King George's horoscope is stronger and more fortunate than that of any other living monarch.

TAFT SURE TO WIN

Forgetting for a minute or two the hurrah—the shouting of Hiram and the tumult of Chet—let's look in the arithmetic and see just what chance Terrible Ted has to get the nomination. His shouters claim that he will have the California delegation. Very well, grant it—though he won't. They claim Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Texas, Washington and Wyoming. Grant that they can carry all these States. The supposition is absurd. But grant it. What then? These States will send 424 delegates to Chicago. The convention consists of 1076 delegates. Giving these shouters everything they claim, they are still beaten by a majority of 228.

As a matter of fact, the President will more than likely carry the California primary; he will have more than half the Illinois delegation, at least half the Indiana delegation, a fourth of Iowa's, a fifth of Kansas', more than half of Michigan's, two-thirds of New York's, two-thirds of Ohio, with a fighting chance in Texas and Washington.

The chances of the Terrible One State are just exactly as good as the chances of the justly celebrated snowball journeying through the dominions of our esteemed contemporary, T. H. E. Devil, Esq.—Stockton Mail.

FEDERAL TIMBER IS TO BE SOLD ON LARGE SCALE

Seventy Miles of Railroad to Be Built in San Joaquin Valley.

NEARLY $500,000 TO BE SPENT ANNUALLY

New Policy Is Definitely Approved by Secretary of Agriculture.

FEDERAL TIMBER IS TO BE SOLD ON LARGE SCALE

Seventy Miles of Railroad to Be Built in San Joaquin Valley.

NEARLY $500,000 TO BE SPENT ANNUALLY

New Policy Is Definitely Approved by Secretary of Agriculture.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9. — That the United States department of agriculture is preparing to sell mature timber on the National forests of California on a large scale attractive to business enterprises is indicated by an article in which the forest service is now publishing. Bids for the purchase of eight hundred million feet of pine, fir, and cedar sawtimber within the Sierra National forest are invited. The government offers a contract providing 20 years in which to remove the timber, with an additional two years for the construction of necessary improvements.

The sale of this timber will mean much to the east side of the San Joaquin valley. Seventy miles of standard gauge railroad will have to be built, and nearly one-half million dollars will be expended annually in connection with logging and manufacturing. The railroad will extend from the mouth of the San Joaquin into the North Fork of the San Joaquin river into Chiquito Basin. The advertisement is attracting lumbermen, and forestry officials regard it as a prime step toward one or two more bids for this body of timber, the most valuable yet offered for sale by the forest service anywhere in the west, will be received.

In this case, as in that of the sale of 73,000,000 feet recently advertised and concluded on the Tahoe forest, the new method of determining the price to be paid for the timber will be applied. Hitherto the government has made sales for long periods, because of the difficulty of forecasting in advance what stumpage rates would be fair both to the government and to the purchaser throughout the life of the contract. It is now proposed to fix definite prices only for a portion of the contract, and to incorporate a plan for the revision of the prices at periodic intervals to conform with the current value of manufactured lumber. This plan calls for a readjustment of rates every five years. If at the end of each five-year period the average selling price of lumber in the market to which the timber is tributary has advanced, the increase will be divided between the government and the purchaser on a basis which will make the purchaser a fair profit, and also allow for possible increases in the cost of operation.

This new policy has been definitely approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, and is looked upon favorably both by the department and by lumbermen. It is hoped that this method of determining prices, which will permit sales of large bodies of timber for long cutting periods, will greatly stimulate the sale of federal timber in California. The proposed sale is one of the largest that has ever been considered by the government, and, consummated, it will be the largest in operation.

Aside from the good impression a youthful appearance makes on others, simply knowing that you are "looking fit" gives a courage to undertake and accomplish things. The skit, "The Modern Menage," is the name of sketch, which was received enthusiastically, and delighted the audience by its clever lines and situations. It was ably staged by Michael Sutherland, who is soon to wed Mrs. Sutherland.

DR. EGAN TO TELL OF DANISH FARMING

COPENHAGEN, March 9.—Dr. Maurice Egan, United States minister to Denmark, has been invited by the Southern Commercial Society to make a series of talks on "Danish Agricultural Co-operation and Conservation" before the Southern Chambers of Commerce of the United States.

The position of Denmark as a school for the study of scientific agriculture is becoming more prominent each year, and Dr. Egan has made a close study of the methods which have made Denmark a leader in co-operative agriculture, especially the effect of the plan on the cost of living. This feature will be considered at length by the lecturer in America.

When questioned in regard to the invitation to speak on this subject in the United States, Dr. Egan declared that such a request had been made. He said that he believed that the success of the Danish farmers was not only due to their perfect co-operation, but also to the fact that they received the hearty support and sympathy of the national and provincial governments.

WHEAT MARKET SHOWS STRENGTH

Heavy Purchases Made by Concerns; Unexpected in Provision Market.

(By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.)

CHICAGO, March 9.—There was a genuine bull market in all the pits on the board of trade today, with the surplus farm reserves and the strength shown in the markets of the old world, coupled with an improved business in cash in the Southwest, the leading factors. In addition to this the seaboard reported a bumper crop of wheat, and the fact that the blizzards of the north had not yet shown an excellent demand for red wheat.

There were periods of weakness at Chicago early on attacks made by those who place very little confidence in the government figures.

Yesterday, but the early sellers were driven under cover before the close and they were obliged to take losses in evening up their position in the market.

One of the features of an excited and strong wheat market was the heavy purchases by some of the concerns which have been for quite a period numbered among the bear houses. There was a lack of selling, even on the sharp advances, with the buying power always in evidence. There was less talk of the market being controlled by the big man of Le Salle street, and it looked as if the situation may ever around into an old-fashioned bull market, with the help of some buying on foreign account. Foreigners were reported as moderate buyers here today and it was said that this buying was on both short and investment account.

The corn market was a strong affair and the trade was of enormous proportions. The feeling was even more bullish than that shown by wheat and the character of the buying was quite healthy. The country speculators quite sold out during the sharp advances of last week were reinstating their lines and bidding for corn around the best prices reached.

Considerable strength was shown in oats, mainly because of the reinstating of lines by those who sold out last week. It is believed oats must sell higher in the season, owing to a backward crop.

The unexpected again happened in the provisions market and many of those who were talking most heartily last week were among the leading buyers today.

NEGRO PORTER SHIES AND COMPANY IS SUED

SAN LUIS OBISPO, March 9.—A negro porter on the Shore Line limited has involved the Pullman company in a suit for damages because the shabby attire of a passenger did not meet with his approval.

S. Pista, one of the most prominent packers and shippers of apples in the coast counties, was overreaching the spraying of trees. He purchased a passage on the Shore Line limited in returning to his home, as the train rolled into the depot at Salinas he clambered aboard, but was snubbed by the negro porter, who gruffly informed him that "Dis train am for gentlemen."

Pista left the train and immediately consulted with his attorney, who began a suit for damages against the Pullman company and the porter.

ALASKA PACKERS TO BUILD DOCKS

Vast System of Warehouses to Be Constructed in Alameda Soon.

ALAMEDA, March 9.—The Alaska Packers' Association, the greatest salmon canning institution in the world and one of the strongest business organizations to be found on the coast, has completed plans for a vast system of warehouses, docks and quays for its plant on the north end of Pinar street. For years the Alaska Packers' Association has maintained a wharf and a small shop at this point, where the association owns an extensive acreage. The possibilities of the association making Alameda its chief location and warehousing its immense salmon pack in Alameda, shipping from this city to all parts of the world, has been figured on, but it is only recently that active work on the plans was undertaken.

undertaken. It is now announced that the plans have been accepted and that work will be undertaken in the near future. The improved harbor will furnish plenty of water for sea shipments and for carrying on the shipping work, while the Southern Pacific is to build a freight spur to handle the continuous and heavy railroad shipments of salmon

At present the association repairs the big fleet of salmon steamers, sailing vessels and tenders which are sent north each year during the fishing season. These ships are now marshaled at the yards, being packed in a basin like sardines in a box. They are tiered in columns of five abreast and in rows of eight or ten ships to the row. The limited wharfage now available answers merely for emergency purposes. Quays will be built about private harbors to be dredged, and alongside the great warehouses, which will hold the millions of cases of fish packed annually.

POSTOFFICE BIDS.

The expected news of progress with the Alameda postoffice plans reached this city from Washington this week. The plans have been completed and bids for the work will be advertised for next Friday, March 15.

RAN ON THE BREAKERS ON VOYAGE TO MATRIMONY

HIS HOPES OF BLISS PROVE
TOTAL LOSS

Capt. W. W. Greene Makes a
Cash Settlement With Miss Gertrude MacFarlane.

Gallant Tar No Longer Faces
Stress of Breach of Promise Suit.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—It cost Captain William Woodus Greene, commander of the Japanese liner Chiyu Maru close to $7000 in cash and much wasted oratory to tamper with the affections of Miss Gertrude MacFarlane. So much became known today when Miss MacFarlane's breach of promise suit against the captain was dismissed by stipulation of attorneys for both sides.

SPOKE OF HER "NERVE."

When Captain Greene sailed out of the Golden Gate on his last voyage he was rampaging about the periphery of women and the "nerve" of Miss MacFarlane in particular. He declared with much effect that he was an Irishman, and that he would fight for his rights to the last drop—the pretty widow who had played him false should never have a penny of his money—not a penny. Miss MacFarlane sat at home, at 1907 Pierce street, and smiled and went ahead with her suit, through her attorney, J. C. Campbell, A. M. Moore, Jr., had been retained by Captain Greene.

CAPTAIN STRIKES HIS COLORS.

Now the captain has caved in. The stipulation does not say how much or why. But here is the settlement that he made with Miss MacFarlane, who sued for $50,000 damages for a broken heart and a spoiled tressure.

Captain Greene pays a liberal fee to her attorney.

Miss MacFarlane is to keep the automobile Greene gave her while they were engaged.

She is also to keep much valuable jewelry he presented to her at various times.

She is also to keep certain sums of money the captain gave her before they quarreled.

REPRESENTS ABOUT $7000.

In terms of money, the agreement by Captain Greene is said to represent about $7000.

After an ardent courtship by Greene a favorite of the minked of Japan, who wore more medals for service rendered the Japanese government than any other Anglo-Saxon, he and Miss MacFarlane became engaged on August 10 last.

They were to have been married on October 14, followed by a honeymoon in Europe. But on that same Friday the captain and Dan Cupid parted company. There were no wedding bells the next day.

SAYS HE WAS DECEIVED.

Greene explained his conduct by saying that Miss MacFarlane had deceived him by not telling him of her former marriage and divorce. She insisted he had known of those facts long before they became engaged.

She and her mother, Mrs. B. M. Greene, said that Mrs. Greene received an anonymous note about the captain's previous conduct, which he could not explain. This note, they insisted, caused him to break the engagement.

Later on they became indignant because the captain had publicly announced he had given Miss MacFarlane some $4200.

Called him a slanderer.

"You are a slanderer, an unreliable man, not fit to be the husband of any woman," was Miss MacFarlane's pointed characterization of her former fiancé the day filed the suit.

"You are a deceiver, a trifier; not the wife for me," was the answering words of Captain Greene.

Greene walked his regular run to the Orient on January 10, the day after the filing of the suit. He will return next Thursday.

Before departing he gave his attorney full power to settle or fight the suit, as he thought best.

Moore used the power of attorney to compromise the case, which resulted in today's dismissal.

J. Abrahamson
Due From the East

Senior Member of Big Dry Goods
Firm Buys Large Stock.

Julius Abrahamson, senior member of the firm of Abrahamson Brothers, one of the largest dry goods establishments in the city, is expected home from a six-weeks' buying trip in eastern cities this week.

All of the large cities have been visited by him, the merchant having spent most of his time in New York and Washington.

Mrs. Abrahamson accompanied her husband and the trip was partially devoted to sight-seeing and pleasure. A large stock of spring and summer goods have been purchased in the markets, according to reports of the firm yesterday. Goods will be shipped at an early date and the assortment comprises all that is new in every line handled by the firm.

DISPUTE IS FATAL.

CHINOOK, Mont., March 9.—Joseph Becho shot and fatally wounded George Crest yesterday. The men are ranchers near Chinook and the shooting, it is said, was the outcome of a dispute over a line fence. Becho gave himself up. This is the first tragedy in the new county of Blaine.

KING CARNIVAL'S REALM TO BE ON SHORE OF LAKE MERRITT
THRILLS FOR ALL BEING PLANNED FOR SHRINERS' CIRCUSCircus Tent to Be Raised
South of Twelfth Street Dam

Using the extensive campus south of Lake Merritt and the Twelfth street dam for the big circus tent, a host of small sideshow tents, a grandstand for the many orchestral and brass bands, a parade ground for the Shriners' patrol and drill team and a display field for a large menagerie, Aahmes Temple of the Mystic Shrine is planning to hold the biggest carnival and circus ever presented in Northern California.

The location, obtained by special grant of the City Council, is ideal in every way, and no chance will be missed by the Shriners to improve the opportunities offered by the site.

The Shriners' circus will be held in Oakland April 1, 2, 3 and 4. The local shrine is planning to accomplish two ends with the funds to be raised, one being the creation of a nucleus for the building and the erection of a magnificent Aahmes temple to be ready to welcome Shriners and other Masons at the time of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and the other being the financing of a comprehensive plan to advertise and boost Oakland at the session of the Imperial council of the order to be held at Los Angeles, May 7 to 11 inclusive.

AIM IS TO AMUSE.

But of more importance to the Shriners who have the big festival and Mardi Gras in hand than the making of money for these ends is the plan to give Oaklanders and visitors to Oakland the biggest, liveliest and most enjoyable show that has ever been held here.

No stone is being left unturned by the Shriners to make their carnival a success as a carnival. It is planned to this end to invite the city, the spirit and the daring wonder of the old-time circus.

Of late years, according to the Shriners, the circus has been educated and polished by the variety and vaudeville and moving picture shows. Final pictures in the motion picture houses, trapeze work and clowns in the vaudeville circuits have taken the place of the old-time three-ring affair, with its stupendous equipment and army of retainers in the public attention, largely because managers have found it less expensive and venturesome to present the circus on the installment plan instead of in its entirety.

But the Shriners promise to put on a real old-fashioned circus replete with thrills of every character that will be a joy to the heart of the small boy and a thrill to the grown-up.

Not a detail will be missed. The Shriners have even gone so far as to employ a large company of "light and water," headed by Carl Reuter, a main branch of whose duties will be the organization of a brigade of Oakland boys to carry water for the big menagerie of animals as a means of obtaining admission to the circus.

The menagerie will be one of the most complete ever seen here. The Shriners have chartered a wild animal and bird pen and a score of other denizens of the jungle and the pampas and the open sea. The arrangements for the Shriners' circus were closed some weeks ago, and since that time the half-hundred trainers and attendants engaged have been at work training the animals to special stunts for the Shriners' event. The animals will be seen for the first time in a series of dramatic and extraordinary tricks that will eclipse anything of the kind ever presented here.

In addition to the circus from the local Shriners are preparing a program of thrills that will carry old residents back to the days of their youth. Among these will be the

To Obtain Funds for the Building of Proposed Aahmes Temple

In shape for the circus. Many are accomplished in negotiating the parallel bars and roman rings, and these also will perform for the benefit of Aahmes Temple side and building fund.

Hiram T. Hall, chairman of the committee in charge of providing Oakland automobile owners and drivers with decorative pennants advertising Oakland and the Shriners circus, announces that he will be ready with hundreds of bright colored decorations of this character in a few days. The pennants will be carried not only by Oakland automobiles, but by those belonging to Shriners and their friends in outlying cities and towns throughout Northern and Central California. The pennants will announce the date and place of the Shriners show.

Pope Watson Praises
Our Literary Taste

Says Social Influence Does Not Set Example For Letters.

NEW YORK, March 9.—William Watson, English poet, praised literary critics and told a fashionable audience at the Hudson theater today that they should congratulate themselves that they lived in a country where social influence "did not set the example for literary taste."

"Your literary standards and tastes," said Watson, "are not set for a frivolous aristocracy and a vulgar and high standard of morals for their own sake. They are set for the nation by the example of their own great writers."

NEW YORK, March 9.—The jury in the case of Elmer M. Amidon, accused of census fraud in Tacoma, failed to reach a verdict today and was discharged by Federal Judge J. H. Riddick, after it had been out more than twenty hours.

It will be held Amidon was accused of census fraud in Tacoma, and was charged with having been implicated in fraud that added 25,000 fictitious names to the roll.

CANAL BILL ENDS 'SHIP RING'

Measure as Reported to House
Does Not Favor American Bottoms.

Knowland Tells of Victory
Over the Railroad-Owned Steamship Lines.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and the operation of the canal was passed today by the House committee on interstate commerce by a vote of 14 to 4. It would give to the President authority to fix tolls within certain limitations, a maximum of $1.25 a ton being prescribed, with a minimum not below an amount sufficient to maintain and operate the canal. No preference would be given to American ships.

Ships owned or controlled by railroads and operated with the intent to restrain trade, or ships engaged in any agreement or "ship ring" or combine, would, under the terms of the bill, be prohibited from passing through the canal.

PROVIDES FOR COURTS.

The bill would ratify and legalize all the work done by the executive authority since the canal zone was taken over and define and legalize the courts providing further legislation.

Under the terms of the bill abolishment of the Panama commission, when the canal approaches completion, is sanctioned and the President is authorized to appoint a governor for the Panama canal and the canal zone at $10,000 a year, the term of office to be four years. Authority is given the President to name all other personnel necessary to the maintenance and operation of the canal and to provide for its sanitation.

There will be a minority report on the bill. Representatives Knowland, California; Louisiana; Louisiana; Calder, New York; and Doremus, Michigan, dissented from the toll charges clause.

MESSAGE FROM KNOWLAND.

The action of the House interstate commerce committee on the Panama canal bill yesterday is the subject of a telegram received late yesterday afternoon from Congressman Joseph R. Knowland. It is addressed to the Chamber of Commerce and reads as follows:

"After a fight which has been waged since the opening of Congress, a provision has been inserted in the Panama canal bill preventing railroad-owned lines or lines in which railroad companies have any interests whatsoever from passing through the Panama canal with the intent to restrain or prevent, or with the effect of restraining competition through the canal. It also provides against steamship lines through the canal entering into combinations to advance rates and stifle competition. Adequate penalties are provided.

"This will prevent the Pacific Mail or any other railroad-controlled line from engaging in foreign trade, but it will prevent them from passing the transcontinental railroads for the purpose of stifling competition.

"I consider the insertion of this provision a great victory, in view of the fact that at one time during consideration of the bill such a provision was stricken out. In this matter I have worked in complete harmony with and answered to carry out the views of William Wheeler, of the traffic bureau, San Francisco.

"On the toll proposition the committee voted against free tolls, but these in favor of this policy will prevent a minority report and there will be one of the biggest fights of the session on the floor of the House over the toll question."

MARE ISLAND TO TALK TO UNALGA

Night Communication by Wireless Will Be in Operation
By Next Fall.

Government to Spend Large
tem From Here to Alaska.

VALLEJO, March 9.—At Mare Island this afternoon an officer high in authority stated that night communication between Mare Island and the new wireless station to be installed at Unalga will be permanently established before the wireless expedition returns to the navy yard next fall. This is the prediction made by those having the work in charge, while it is expected that the establishment of the high power station at Northhead some time next November will enable daylight communication to be carried on between that station and Mare Island under all conditions.

THEIR VALUE SHOWN.

The value of the Alaska stations is being shown at the present time, five thousand words approximately being handled by the Sitka station.

Ninety thousand dollars will be expended on the further perfecting of the work now being assembled at the navy yard, the third large requisition having thus far been forwarded to the department.

SENT FROM WASHINGTON.

Probably $25,000 worth of material for the work will be taken from here, exclusive of the new sets to be installed at the various stations, all of which are to be sent out from the bureau in Washington.

It is probable that no electrical work will be done at the Pribilof Island station this year, although it was originally intended to include this work with that to be done in installing new sets at Kodiak and Unalga.

With four more big cruisers, Mare Island will have the largest fleet of vessels on the Pacific coast. It will also mean that the eastern policy for keeping one warship at Mare Island will be followed in the future.

It was learned at Mare Island this afternoon that the vessels of the Pacific torpedo boat destroyer flotilla, which the exception of the USS Albatross, will be stationed at the local station, are to commence their target practice near San Diego on April 1. It is expected that the crews will also have their practice next month.

ONE DIVISION, which will probably be ordered to this coast during the next few weeks, will consist of the cruisers Washington, Tennessee, Montana and North Carolina.

MORE VESSELS HERE.

With the Washington, Tennessee, Montana, North Carolina and the California, Maryland and South Dakota, making Mare Island their headquarters, the residents of this city can look forward to even better times than have ever been experienced at this local station. Several yard officials stated this afternoon that they have been informed on good authority that it is the present policy of the navy department to reduce the number of vessels on the Atlantic seaboard and send a number around to this section of the globe for the better protection of the Pacific coast.

TO FOLLOW POLICY.

With four more big cruisers, Mare Island will have the largest fleet of vessels on the Pacific coast. It will also mean that the eastern policy for keeping one warship at Mare Island will be followed in the future.

It was learned at Mare Island this afternoon that the vessels of the Pacific torpedo boat destroyer flotilla, which the exception of the USS Albatross, will be stationed at the local station, are to commence their target practice near San Diego on April 1. It is expected that the crews will also have their practice next month.

the writer and methinks Bud will have a pretty nifty bunch to defend the home town honors when the play begins.

Sizing up the manager himself, Sharpe is a mighty fine looking chap, and, at the same time, a mighty fine looking fellow.

He is a mighty fine looking chap around that first base. He's got a world of "pep" and ginger stowed away in that athletic form of his, and he's a real hard tearing-in worker. Just as easy as falling off a log is the scooping of grounders to him and he can catch a low throw or a high throw with either hand.

And when he shoots the ball to nip a runner it travels like a bullet. Now, if Bud can just close the ball when the regular game starts on he's going to be a pipkin around the initial sack.

Third base has Hillie and Nettling fighting. The writer is not sure who will win, but he will be a winner. Christian won a majority of his games and in practice is looming up just as strong. You see, he has the youth to help him along, but Gus is some pumpkins, too, and he says that the gang will have to go some to oust him from a steady job on the team; yes, sirree. Sizing it all up, he looks at the boys and the girls and gives a long look all to the good but this doesn't mean that Marlinton, Bohner, Brookes, Perkins and Pope can't pitch, though, for in practice shows them up as being men that know the game and from this array of talent Sharpe should see away.

MAXWELL ISSUES REPORT ON RUN

Story of Non-Motor Stop Feat
Told in Interesting Manner.

The United States Motors Co., makers of the Maxwell, which car is sold locally by the Maxwell Sales Agency, A. C. Trull, manager, have just issued an interesting booklet on the Non-Motor Stop run made by their car just three years ago. It tells the history of the 23 days of a strenuous grind and in it is a report of the technical committee appointed after the run was over to examine the condition of the record breaking car.

The Bay State Automobile Association had charge of the contest and their report on the expense of running, fuel consumed, etc., is as follows:

All parts were found in proper position and properly connected.

Main crank shaft bearings showed 0055 of an inch wear.

Connecting rod bearings showed 0020 of an inch.

The pistons were smooth and clean. All rings were bright. The wrist pins were firmly held in the pistons.

The cylinder bores were bright and smooth. The inlet valve seats were smooth and clean and showed a bearing seat entirely round. The exhaust valves showed some carbon spots.

Cam shaft showed .005 of an inch.

Push rods and guides showed .002 of an inch.

This report was made by the Bay State Automobile Association. The run was made in 25 days and the motor was never stopped from the start to the finish. No adjustments were made. This was a sealed bonnet contest. No seal could be broken only at controls and by the official appointed to take the consumption of fuel used by the car.

Fuel Consumption.

LEAVES PULPIT TO SEEK LAURELS AS A POLITICIAN

REV. RICHARD L. HENSHELL.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 9.—Rev. Richard Henschell has resigned his position as pastor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church to become actively interested in politics. He has held the position of pastor for sixteen years. The pastor is not a prohibitionist, and believes in personal liberty in the broadest sense of the word. He resides in Minneapolis and has announced himself as a candidate for mayor of the city.

MOTOR SLEIGHING LATEST AUTO FAD

Cold Weather Brings Forth the Novel Craft in the East.

GALVESTON, March 9.—Motor sleighing is the latest automobile fad. According to the united verdict of its devotees, a ride in a motor sled compares to a trip in a horse-drawn vehicle with wheels.

The long period of cold weather in the northern cities has brought out a large number of motor sleds of a more or less ingenious type. Up to date, the palm for originality must be accorded to Frank B. Willis of Indianapolis, whose sled is not only the most ample in size, but also the most sensational in deeds and appearance.

Mr. Willis started out by equipping his Flanders "20" with runners in front, instead of wheels. He had a lot of fun with this rig, but had so much power and speed at his disposal that he cast about to make his vehicle more commodious. He secured an extra Flanders "20" body of the suburban type, front axle attached, and joined it to his own car, back to back. The extreme rear end was mounted on runners and coupled to a steering device. This allowed the rig to be whirled around city streets on the same principle as a hook and ladder truck. Five seats were mounted on the peculiar body.

Thus equipped, Mr. Willis and his rig have been for some time a rapidly moving center of observation about the Hoosier metropolis. He has festooned as many as twenty persons on the seats and sides and has shown ability to make forty miles an hour whenever he cares to. At this speed the sensation is said to be as near to flying as any limitation can approach. Mr. Willis doesn't yet know how fast his rig will really go and is sleighing for an ice straightaway on which to really cut it loose.

So well was the Flanders "20" auto-sleight working in Indianapolis that Mr. Willis braved the chance of a show and took it with a party of friends, to the Chicago show. There many maintained that the sled was more of a curiosity than the big show itself. He made the call his sled "The Sleighter," presumably after the Flanders "20," similarly dubbed, in which he won a long string of track races and hill climbs during the summer and fall of 1911.

Other motor cars, for example, under favorable conditions, will travel mile after mile with a gasoline consumption average of fifteen miles or better to the gallon. How many, however, are there that will go on for more than 17,000 miles and at the end of that period have a mark of nearly seventeen miles traveled to each gallon consumed? We doubt the possibility of the existence of many cars which can come up to this test.

As for tires, each one of the seven used on the WARREN is still good for hundreds of miles of additional service. The original four were kept in service for 8000 miles. Yet a tire-maker will offer a

Infected While Performing an Difficult Operation for Appendicitis.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Infected through the scratch of a needle on the forefinger of his right hand, received in an emergency operation for appendicitis on board the steamship Mexico two weeks ago, Dr. Charles Gennerich, of 226 West Seventy-eighth street, is in a serious condition from blood poisoning. In Miss Emily R. Brown's Hudson sanitarium, 2365 Seventh avenue.

Dr. Gennerich, who is a visiting surgeon at Roosevelt hospital, the Women's hospital, and other institutions, was returning from Mexico where he had been called to attend a member of the family of General Porfirio Diaz, erstwhile president of the republic, having been medical advisor to General Diaz for several years. He made the trip on board the steamship Mexico, of the Ward line.

In the run from Vera Cruz to Havana, Timothy Mahoney, a waiter, became ill. Dr. Brian, the ship's physician, diagnosed the case as appendicitis. He told Captain Miller an immediate operation was necessary, but he did not possess the necessary instruments. Captain Miller asked Dr. Gennerich to take the case. Dr. Gennerich operated, with the assistance of Dr. Brian.

When Dr. Gennerich had almost completed sewing up the incision the patient recovered slightly from the influence of ether, and in drawing away his hand the surgeon pricked his finger, which was unprotected by a glove.

In the evening at 8 o'clock the subject will be "The Place of Christ Doubt."

Forty-Nine Days of Constant Running Without a Repair

A Performance Proving the Unquestioned Reliability of the Warren, Judged in Any Way You Will

The triumphal conquest of the winning WARREN was brought to a close last night after forty-nine consecutive days of running under every conceivable kind of road and weather conditions, with the car little worse for the wear and tear, and ready now, it needs be, to duplicate its performance without a single repair being necessary.

The worth of a motor car—its perfection or its weakness—as the case may be, can be brought out in a conclusive manner in a grind of a long-distance nature. The hidden weakness not apparent in the experimental stages of automobile construction is just the bugaboo to crop up once a motor car has seen a little actual service.

No automobile was ever put to the grindstone for a test, the like of the one from which the WARREN has just emerged with flying colors. Nearly 18,000 miles of rough, steady, traveling has failed to show wherein the WARREN lacks in those qualities that go to make up a good motor car. Understand now—we don't represent or claim it to be the best car made. We do know, however, that it has no equal within its class.

And the WARREN will do what every owner expects it to do all the time with less expense and trouble than any other medium grade or priced motor car.

Other motor cars, for example, under favorable conditions, will travel mile after mile with a gasoline consumption average of fifteen miles or better to the gallon. How many, however, are there that will go on for more than 17,000 miles and at the end of that period have a mark of nearly seventeen miles traveled to each gallon consumed? We doubt the possibility of the existence of many cars which can come up to this test.

As for tires, each one of the seven used on the WARREN is still good for hundreds of miles of additional service. The original four were kept in service for 8000 miles. Yet a tire-maker will offer a guarantee of only 3500 miles on any car. In this instance the remarkable record was made possible alone by the light but sturdy WARREN. We would go on giving other equally interesting figures. Our space is limited, however, and we've other matters to present.

Of importance to the motor car buyer—after his purchase—is the service his car will render and the service he will receive from the organization behind the car. You receive from us service in these two important respects. The first is the service rendered to you by a car of exceptional worth and thorough dependability. The second is the general service of this organization, which guarantees to you that the individual service of any WARREN Car shall be satisfactory under all circumstances.

When you purchase a WARREN, you acquire thereby membership in the big WARREN family and you are entitled to demand this second and greater—service for all time.

As you read this statement bear in mind the WARREN'S remarkably low scale of prices, quality and equipment considered.

Note again the price and equipment of the Warren 12-30 ($1400). Recall the fact that this the first car of its power and size ever sold for less than $1600 equipped with an efficient self-starter.

Then take the other WARREN Cars, one by one, and see how this same advantage, based on price, specifications and equipment, is carried through the entire line. Note what those specifications really mean, and study the comfort and convenience furnished by the Warren's roomy construction and luxurious appointments.

Then come back to WARREN service—to the factory policy that stands ready to replace instantly not only any defective part which may have eluded their lynx-eyed inspectors, but also any part which shows wear within a year.

Now you will understand why WARREN owners have more than the ordinary sense of security and comfort.

WORK OF INTEREST TO GEOGRAPHERS

Geological Survey Gives Results of Spirit Leveling in Colorado.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The United States Geological Survey has recently issued Bulletin 456—"The Results of Spirit Leveling in Colorado, 1895 to 1910, Inclusive," by Robert B. Marshall, Chief Geographer. All results of spirit leveling in the state previously published by the Geological Survey and all the results of later work are included in this report.

Approximately 1400 datum points are described in the bulletin, the elevations ranging from a minimum of 2,469.06 feet up to 14,109.06 feet. The lowest point is in the area known as the Holyoke quadrangle and is thus described:

Julyburg, T. 12 N., R. 44 W., at railroad station.
Iron post stamped "SID-NEY 3469".

The highest point in the state whose elevation is given is on Pikes Peak, and is described as follows:

Pikes Peak, in monument of rocks on summit of Pikes Peak; aluminum tablet stamped "14107 1908-7".

The Geological Survey has already published 81 topographic maps of quadrangles, mostly in Colorado, and on these maps the elevations are stated to the nearest foot, but those given in Bulletin 456 are accurately stated to a thousandth of a foot. Being, therefore, a partial dictionary of exact altitudes for Colorado, the report is invaluable to engineers, surveyors and others who need such information.

All elevations given in the bulletin are referred to mean sea level, which is the level that the sea would assume if the influence of the wind and the tides were eliminated. This level is determined from observations made by means of tidal gauges placed at stations where local conditions, such as the presence of long, narrow bays, rivers, and the like, feature, would not affect the height of the water. To obtain even approximately correct results these observations must extend at least one lunar month, and if accuracy is desired they must extend over several years. At ocean stations the half-tide level and the mean sea level usually differ but little. The Survey recommends that engineers and others who have occasion to use the bench-mark elevations apply for the adjusted values instead of using the figures stamped on the marks themselves, as office adjustment of the notes and reduction to mean sea level datum may change some of the figures that the original markings may be 1 or 2 feet in error.

GAS-FILLED ROOM IS SCENE OF PROPOSAL

ST. LOUIS, March 9.—A proposal of marriage, made in a gas-filled room while the two were taking a course of mine rescue work, resulted at Collinsville, Ill., in the marriage of Miss Nellie Trione, 21 years old, and Clifford De Tanne, 23 years old, both of that town.

Last December when the Illinois state mine rescue car was in Collinsville, "De Tanne" was taking the full course of instruction. One of the "lessons" was to enter a gas-filled room equipped with a helmet, and remain in there as long as possible. Miss Trione, who was a clerk in a department store, insisted on entering the room with De Tanne. She remained as long as he did.

After the marriage the couple confided to friends the engagement dated from the time they were taking their first mine rescue lesson.

COLLEGIANS WILL PLAY ALL-STAR ON CAMPUS

On St. Mary's campus this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the second team of the institution, will meet the All Stars of Oakland in a game of baseball. The team, which is being coached by Harry Schumann, will be at the points for the All Stars.

NEW YORK, March 9.—After he had deceived two detectives by dangling an empty sleeve before them while his arm was twisted behind his back, a man who described himself as Charles Arnold, of 884 Third avenue, was sent to the house for six months by Magistrate Barlow in the men's night court.

Detectives Franke and Rice were standing near the Third avenue elevated station at Twenty-third street when they were accosted by a shabbily dressed man apparently minus an arm. At the station, however, the beggar produced another arm, much to the chagrin of the sleuths.

GREW AN ARM DURING WALK TO STATION

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—"Strange to say, the jury never believes doctors when they are sworn as expert witnesses," said Judge Stacy Sulzberger, of the court of common pleas, in an address to the University of Pennsylvania medical students, in the medical laboratories of the university.

Judge Sulzberger's advice to the future doctors was to at all times tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth when on the witness stand.

"The notion that a jurymen will believe anything that he is told by witnesses, whether expert or not, is all wrong," said the judge. "The average intelligence, among ordinary jurymen is apt to be underrated by persons of higher education. Their common sense, however, is quite likely to produce as fair results as the superior intelligence of 12 other men would produce."

"One is never safe in assuming that the expert testimony of an established and wealthy physician is better than that of a younger member of the profession. The older man gives more semblance of probability than the younger one."

"It behooves a professional man to be free of passion when he gives his testimony. He should not let his desire to win for his client influence his statements, or give his testimony exactly like any other witness. After a man has told the truth he must try to ornament it by any Cornishian expedient. It is not possible for a man to avoid all the pitfalls, but at least he can guard against the ordinary imprudences."

"No secret is so short-lived and ephemeral as the medical. It only lasts twenty years. As an example of the changes that are constantly taking place, you can all probably remember the time when the bacillus was considered a joke. In a progressive science such as medicine, especially in this true if he is to be a witness. The traction companies have their own papers in the latest medical news in the current magazines, and are prepared to disconnect the witnesses of the opposite side."

"I have seen a man laid down why a doctor should be truthful in giving evidence in court. Not to do so is disservice to the patient and to the profession, violates the oath and, furthermore, may hurt one's own client."

NO, TYPIST IS NOT A MECHANIC

Hence Women Operators of the Typewriter Can't Come Under 8-Hour Law.

SPOKANE, March 9.—Stenographers, typists and other office women in Spokane are figuratively up in arms over the decision by Judge Chapman in the Pierce county Superior Court, who ruled in a test case of the eight-hour law that a woman who operates a typewriter is not a mechanic, even though employed in a mechanical establishment. Not that they desire to be classed as mechanics, but to guard against longer hours they may organize a union.

There is also talk of forming an eight-hour office workers' federation throughout Washington, with branch offices in Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma and cities in Central Washington, to lobby at the next session of the legislature for an amendment to the following section of the state law, which formed the basis of Judge Chapman's opinion:

"No female shall be employed in any mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel or restaurant in this state more than eight hours a day."

Judge Chapman held that an office separate from the place in which manufacturing or other mechanical operations are carried on is not itself a manufacturing establishment, hence Louis H. Bean, the defendant, did not violate the law by working a stenographer more than eight hours a day. The court ruled that the test of the law was not so much the nature of the service, as to question whether or not it was rendered in a mechanical establishment.

Managers of the larger offices in Spokane declare there is no plan on foot to increase the working hours of office help, saying also that stenographers employed in local manufacturing, mercantile and office buildings have never worked more than eight hours a day, even before the state law was enacted a year ago.

In Sydney, Australia, on the last day of the recent six-day bicycle race, a crowd of 50,000 turned out. The race was won by Goulet and Hehr, after a long struggle between Goulet and Hehr, who had pulled Goulet, who did the sprinting for his team, two laps, or over 1000 yards. An outdoor track is now proposed over there.

BOWLERS AT CHICAGO GO AFTER BIG RECORDS

CHICAGO, March 9.—Bowlers from Cleveland and St. Louis went after records in the minor events of the American Bowling Congress today.

Louis Franz and Chas. Gilbert of Cleveland, who won the national association bowling meet a year ago, were among those scheduled to bowl. A. Wootter of St. Louis also competed in the individuals.

BRIDE SMOKE IN COUNCIL CHAMBER

Women, in Fight Against Nicotine, Meet it at City Hall.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Club women interested in a campaign against smoking on street cars visited the rooms of the local transportation committee of the city council yesterday and their courage failed them. As they peered in at the smoking room, they were able to distinguish the city fathers so thick was the tobacco smoke.

"I'm afraid the addressers are not much in sympathy," said Mrs. J. F. Presnell of 4733 Kenmore avenue, chairman of the civic department of the North Shore Culture club. "I observe they are all smoking."

"That is all right," responded Mrs. Rhoads, secretary of the women's party. "I don't object to their smoking in their committee rooms. If they will vote to abolish the nuisance on the street cars."

The local transportation committee was engaged in a discussion of subway with representatives of the public utility corporations and the members told the women that they probably would not dispose of the ordinance against smoking on street cars before they adjourned.

The ordinance later was taken up and referred to a sub-committee composed of Alderman Hyndahl, Stewart and Captain. Chairman Hyndahl said the club women and all others who objected to the smoking nuisance would have opportunity to present their views when the sub-committee met.

"Do you want to stop the smoking on the cars?" asked Alderman Stewart. "That would be a hardship on the workmen, wouldn't it?"

Alderman Stewart is in the clear business, although he said that would have no bearing on the case, as he might vote in favor of the ordinance after he had heard the objections to smoking.

The representatives of the women's clubs departed after being assured they would have a hearing and said they would have a large delegation present when the sub-committee takes up discussion of the anti-smoking ordinance.

TWO PERSONS DEAD FROM POISONED CANDY

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 9.—The police department is completely baffled by the mystery surrounding the death by poisoned candy, Saturday, of Simon O'Malley, 50, and Bonnie Reedy, 3. The autopsy yesterday on the bodies by Coroner Senatore served only to corroborate the belief that death had been caused by poison, possibly strychnine, placed in candy and left outside the door of the O'Malley home.

Louis Spencer, one of the victims, is still at the city hospital, but it is believed he will recover.

Twenty detectives made an exhaustive canvass of Minneapolis drugstores to discover where the poison had been bought and by whom, but their work was fruitless. For more than two hours Miss Gladys Grates, O'Malley's housekeeper, was subjected to a searching cross-examination by the authorities, but the police obtained no further light on the mystery.

Although the police have practically no clue, they believe the double tragedy was the work of a woman.

JEM DRISCOLL MAY COME TO MEET JOHN KILBANE

NEW YORK, March 9.—Jem Driscoll, the clever English featherweight, may be induced to come to this country and meet Johnny Kilbane, champion of the world, at a big offer to visit America, and box him at his club, the Madison Athletic club. Boag claims that he will be the first local club to get Kilbane's services, as he claims that both Kilbane and Jimmy Dunn, the latter's manager, promised it to him.

HAP. HOGAN SATISFIED WITH TWO OF HIS MEN

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—"Happy" Hogan, manager of the Vernon club, is well satisfied with the way his new men, "Dick" Bayless and Shortstop Litchie, are showing up.

"Both of them are working out in good shape," said the Vernon manager, today. "I believe they will make a good hit with the fans."

HILLSIDE HOTEL NEARS COMPLETION

CLAREMONT HOSTELRY TO BE READY BEFORE 1915

Magnificent Structure Commands View of Hills, Bay and Cities

One of the most pleasing evidences of the coming of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and of present prosperity about the bay is the renewal of work upon the Claremont hotel, a magnificent hostelry in the hills just across the Berkeley line. It is to be completed by 1915.

The exterior has been repainted a rich cream color, with brown trimmings and red roof. Inside plastering, flooring and a large amount of other work is being done, having been left uncompleted when construction ceased a few years ago.

The task of finishing the spacious structure was resumed last autumn, and will proceed leisurely. No definite time has been set for its completion but it is to be ready for occupancy early in 1915 or shortly before.

The exterior had been finished before work was temporarily abandoned, but much inside work remained, which will require a lengthy period to complete.

The hotel contains more than 300 rooms, most of which command an unrivaled view of the hills, bay and intervening landscape. The grounds consist of eighteen acres, and into them have been transplanted many rare trees and shrubs. The gardens will be made a feature of the hostelry, in keeping with its suburban setting. The site was formerly occupied by a private residence.

A pedestrian tunnel, lined with light-colored brick and well lighted is to extend from the terminal of the Claremont avenue-Key Route and the Russell street car lines at the edge of the grounds to the basement of the hotel, where an elevator is to be located for the convenience of guests.

The hotel has been taken over by Frank Havens and associates from the Claremont hotel company, in which F. M. Smith, John H. Spring and others were interested.

MODERN ELECTRIC ROAD TO BE CONSTRUCTED

Will Place Newark Within 55 Minutes of San Francisco via Dumbarton

NEWARK, March 9.—A representative of a firm of electric railway contractors which is now building a line into Oakland is busy engaged with a body of San Francisco capitalists regarding the promotion of an electric system to tap this and the neighboring towns. This line will be a San Francisco suburban service in way of this city and Dumbarton union bridge.

Property owners have been interviewed regarding their disposition about granting rights of way. In practically all cases it was found that

RAILROADS AID ADVANCEMENT OF OAKLAND

"The city of Oakland is now on friendly relations with all of the railroads and has come to a thorough understanding with them. The Southern Pacific, the Key Route and the Western Pacific roads have all recognized the city's control and have taken franchises from her. The Southern Pacific, Western Pacific and Key Route are paying Oakland rental—Mayor Frank K. Mott.

We appreciate greatly the support which the people of Oakland have given us during the past year both in our freight and passenger departments, and are doing everything we can to please in turn the people of this section.—E. L. Lomax, manager ger traffic manager of the Western Pacific Railroad.

Oakland is one of the most important railroad points on the Pacific coast and owes much to the transcontinental lines which have their terminals here.

The foregoing statements by Mayor Mott and E. L. Lomax are characteristic of the feeling between the municipality and the railroad companies.

SPEND LARGE SUMS.

Heavy expenditures have been made and are contemplated by the companies now leasing privileges on the western waterfront and by the Santa Fe.

The Southern Pacific is erecting a magnificent depot at Sixteenth street, following the completion of a $3,000,000 system of electric suburban lines. Work is almost completed on a downtown line which is to connect the Webster-street line and Oakland mole by way of Sixteenth street.

Improvement of the Oakland mole is in progress, in preparation for the removal within a few years of Long wharf and the transfer of the ship and car traffic to the south side of the mole, where freight tracks and ships are now being constructed.

The Key Route is soon to fill in its pier.

FEBRUARY WAS BANNER MONTH FOR BUILDING

A remarkable showing in the number and value of building permits granted by the city for a winter month was made during February. The valuation of structures created being more than half a million dollars to the exact, $515,593.

The permits numbered 365.

For a winter month and a short month, containing two holidays, the record is significant. In February, 1911, 216 permits were issued, the valuation being but $240,000. The increase over January of the present year, is also large, a permit for that month having been issued for a valuation of $146,000. The record for last December, also an average for

PREPARING FOR BIG DOWNTOWN STRUCTURES

Havens and Leimert to Build; Wrecking for Kahn Arcade Store

Important downtown realty and building developments of the week were the beginning of wreckage of buildings on the site of the proposed immense arcade structure to be erected by Kahn Brothers, and the resale of the corner of Fourteenth and City streets, occupied by the First Methodist church, which means that the edifice will be demolished in May to make room for a modern business structure.

Wickham Havens and Walter Leimert, the new owners of the corner, are averse to permitting the property to remain unimproved longer than that time. In view of the increased values of frontages in the new retail district, and the profits to be derived from new structures there, their desire to build soon is a natural one.

The resale of the church site affords another illustration of the steady increase in property values in the new shopping section. The corner, 100x125 feet in size, was sold about a year ago to a syndicate, of which Havens, Leimert and others were members, for $275,000. The capitalist owners then sold the southern 25 feet on City street for $40,000 to Mrs. Pauline Koch, and last week disposed of the remaining land, 100x109 feet, to Leimert and Havens for $310,000, making a total profit on both resales of $15,000. That is not the whole golden story, for Mrs. Koch has resold the portion which she bought to Tony Clouck for $50,000, according her a profit of $10,000. So the total increase through resales amounts almost to one-third of the price at which the property was sold by the church one year ago.

ARCADE BUILDING

The Kahn Brothers are now beginning to make ready for the new building of Kahn Brothers, a 2-story structure, occupying frontages of 120 feet on San Pablo avenue, 120 feet on Broadway and about 60 feet on Sixteenth street. The work of wreckage will not occupy more than a fortnight, and then excavation will begin for the structure which is to change the appearance of the entire block architecturally. Bids for steel are to be received at once, and before spring ends work upon the building will be well under way.

The rainfall of the last week was appreciated by merchants and real estate dealers, as well as by farmers of the county, to whom it has the most concrete importance. The hills are beginning to display a richer green. The shops are beginning to show signs of spring, with windows of marvelous attractiveness.

MANUFACTURING PROGRESS.

The location of a big carbon manufacturing concern in East Oakland recently has called attention to the work of the Chamber of Commerce in securing industries for this city, to strengthen the foundation of the community's prosperity. This foundation is formed by a steadily growing manufacturing, farming and mercantile activity. The city is constructing a magnificent harbor, has unrivaled transportation facilities, and has a vast acreage for factory sites.

The need of more who's-who and jobbing houses is a pressing one. Through these agencies commodities are distributed. They send out an army of commercial travelers, who give publicity to the city whose commercial interests they represent, and proclaim the city's economic independence. Oakland commands the cheapest energy known and facilities for the delivery of goods by land or by water with the greatest dispatch to all parts of the world.

An income of more than a million dollars in Oakland bank lendings over the

NORTHERN CAL. CITRUS REGION

Land in Many Counties Ideal for Growing of Oranges; Olives Thrive.

The advantages of the northern part of the state, especially Butte and Yuba counties, as ideal land for the growing of oranges and olives are becoming more generally recognized and as a result the demand for acreage in this section of the state is greater than ever before.

The orange and olive exposition held at Oroville last December emphatically demonstrated that no finer land for the growing of these fruits could be found anywhere. This exposition, which was one of the most successful ever held in that district, has been the means of stimulating real estate transfers in Butte and Yuba counties and many inquiries are being made.

Land which had heretofore been considered as valuable for oranges and olives has been found but few purchasers but this condition is already undergoing a change since the wonderful exhibit given at Oroville.

The first company to subdivide and offer land for sale in this section a small purchaser is the Western Farmer and Water Company, 1011 Examiner building, San Francisco. Although this firm has but recently entered the field it reports that there are many demands for property and interest among the men who are seeking a small acreage is general.

It has been shown by the recent fruit exhibits at Oroville that oranges and olives and similar products for which there is a tremendous market, ripen in this section six weeks earlier than in other parts of the state. This has resulted in a splendid advertisement for this district and will be responsible for the transfer of many land holdings.

On or twelve miles north of Marysville and south of Palermo the land sales have been particularly active and it is in this particular district that the Western Farmer and Water Company is marketing small places which will make ideal sites for the small farmer.

It is known that in this particular section several thousand acres have passed into the possession of the big land operators. In fact, it is claimed that the Los Angeles and Pasadena capitalists are furnishing the money for the development and improvement of this section but that interest has extended as far north as Seattle.

This general interest will result in a wonderful development of this section and will be the means of opening up a large territory for the growing of deciduous and citrus fruits. With this stimulus, it is believed, the interest shown by moneyed men will be only a question of time when this district will be one of the best in the state.

TO BUILD OFFICE ON SUBDIVISION

Interest is Shown in Crocker-Amazon Tract, Which Has Civic Center.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The Crocker Estate Company has accepted plans for a tract office to be erected on the new Crocker-Amazon tract at Mission street and Geneva avenue.

This office will be strictly Mission style with cement exterior. The coping will be arranged so that flowers and palms will be grown on the roof adding to the attraction of the structure. As this corner in the Geneva car line transfer point, provision has been made for a large waiting room.

The buying public is showing much interest in the way the Crocker-Amazon tract is planned, being the only subdivision in San Francisco having a civic center from which all the streets radiate in the shape of spokes.

The Crocker Estate Company have found that many of the purchasers of their lots who wish to build homes or store buildings have been handicapped for lack of loan accommodations, as the associated banks of San Francisco do have heretofore not made any considerable number of loans south of Thirtieth street. A petition is about to be submitted to the banks to revise their ruling and extend loans in this important district. It is expected the banks will take all reasonable action necessary in favor of this new district of San Francisco.

BUILDING RECORD SHOWS PROGRESS

Month's Total Is $515,593; Weekly Valuation Amounts to $147,140.

The showing made in the building field during February not only far exceeds the average winter month, but almost equals the average of the favorable seasons.

The fact that almost half of the total valuation was for one-story dwellings is indicative of the growth of homes in the outlying residence tracts. There is a large demand by home-builders for cottages and bungalows. The number of permits for this class of dwellings during February was 122, and the contracts amounted to $214,391.

Dwellings erected numbered but 27, valuation $36,150.

DRY YEAR COMING.

YOU CAN MAKE BIG MONEY HERE.

All signs point to one of the driest years, California, for 1912.

No matter how long or severe the drought you will have all the water you need here.

Our supply has never failed—cannot fail. The snow that melts over the snow most steady flow of any stream in California is already on the mountain crest, safer and surer than if it were in a reservoir.

While crops here will be as large, or larger than usual, non-irrigated farmers will have a failure. Districts where the water supply is short will have part failure.

Alfalfa will be worth $20 or $25 a ton. The farmer here will grow 2 or 10 tons per acre will pay for his land in one crop. Everything else will be correspondingly high.

The great boon of irrigation will be demonstrated as never before.

Los Molinos is one among the three or four irrigated districts in California where the water supply is absolutely and abundantly sufficient for the driest season.

One can still plant alfalfa and can get a good crop this year.

But you must hurry.

Come at once and bring your live stock and equipment. Wild pasture plentiful.

Only $150 to $400 needed to get possession of 10 to 20-acre tract—richest sediment loam soil, plow ever stirred.

Grows everything you ever saw grow anywhere.

More fruit, better fruit, earlier fruit than Southern California.

Big money in dairying, hogs, poultry, vegetables, bees.

Creamery furnishes all the cows you want, taking one of your monthly cream check in payment.

Choice tracts going fast.

Big money in dairying, hogs, poultry, vegetables, bees.

Don't let them beat you to the best thing in the State.
